BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH

Born 20 August 1833 in North Bend, Ohio, Benjamin Harrison became the twenty-third president of the United States, serving in that office from 1889 to 1893. He was the son of John Scott Harrison (1804-1878) and Elizabeth Irwin (1810-1850), the grandson of President William Henry Harrison (1773-1841), and the great-grandson of Benjamin Harrison V (ca. 1726-1791), a signer of the Declaration of Independence and governor of Virginia.

Harrison attended Farmers' College in Cincinnati and then graduated from Miami University of Ohio in 1852. On 20 October 1853, Harrison married Caroline Lavinia Scott (1 October 1832–25 October 1892). He read law for two years and was admitted to the bar in Ohio in 1854. That same year, Harrison and his wife moved to Indianapolis, where he established a law practice. He became active in Republican Party politics, and served as city attorney in 1857. Three years later he was elected reporter of the state Supreme Court.

Mr. and Mrs. Harrison were both active in the First Presbyterian Church. They had three children, Russell Benjamin Harrison (1854-1936), Mary (later Mrs. James R. McKee) (1858-1930), and a daughter who died very shortly after birth in 1861.

During the Civil War in 1862, Harrison helped to organize the Union's 70th Indiana Infantry and was commissioned as its colonel. His regiment was assigned to guard the newly captured Louisville and Nashville Railroad. In 1864 Harrison and his men joined General William T. Sherman in Georgia, but Harrison was soon summoned back to Indiana by Governor Oliver P. Morton to assist in Republican political campaigning. He rejoined his command, and on 22 March 1865 was brevetted brigadier-general.

After the war, Harrison returned to his law practice. He ran for governor of Indiana in 1876, but lost. The next year during the national railroad strike, Governor James Douglas Williams appointed him as a member of the citizens' committee to settle the strike in Indianapolis and placed him in command of the state troops there. In 1878 he presided over the Republican state convention, and in 1880 he was chairman of the Indiana delegation to the Republican National Convention. In 1881 he was admitted to practice before the United States Supreme Court, and he easily won election to the U.S. Senate.

Harrison attended the Republican National Convention in Chicago in 1884 and was considered a possible "dark horse" candidate, but he did not launch a campaign that year. In 1888 he did run for president, basing his campaign in Indianapolis. He daily addressed visiting delegations first at his Delaware Street house and later at University Park. He won the presidency after receiving 100,000 fewer popular votes than the incumbent Grover Cleveland because he received 233 votes in the Electoral College compared to Cleveland's 168. Harrison's vice president was Levi P. Morton of New York.

Significant events during the Harrison administration included the McKinley Tariff Act, the Sherman Anti-Trust Act, the Wounded Knee Massacre, and the expenditure of more than a billion dollars by Congress for the first time. Although not popular, Harrison, as the incumbent, secured his party's renomination in 1892, only to lose the election to Grover Cleveland.

Mrs. Harrison died of tuberculosis in the White House during her husband's administration in 1892. She was buried in Crown Hill Cemetery in Indianapolis.

On 6 April 1896, Harrison married Mrs. Mary Scott Lord Dimmick (1858-1948) at St. Thomas Protestant Episcopal Church in New York City. Mary was the widowed niece of Harrison's first wife, and had acted as her aunt's secretary. She eventually was persuaded by her aunt to live with the Harrisons. Mary and Benjamin had a daughter together, named Elizabeth (1897-1955).

After his presidency, Harrison returned to his legal practice in Indianapolis. In 1900 he represented the Republic of Venezuela in a boundary dispute with Great Britain. He wrote several books, including This Country of Ours (1897), which became a popular textbook, and Views of an Ex-President (1901).

Harrison died of pneumonia on 13 March 1901. His body lay in state in the rotunda of the Indiana State Capitol all day Saturday, 16 March, and funeral services were held on Sunday at the First Presbyterian Church where Harrison had been a member for almost fifty years. He was buried in Crown Hill Cemetery in Indianapolis on 17 March.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

This collection consists of black-and-white photographs, lithographs, one color advertisement, newspaper pages, and one pencil drawing relating to the life of President Benjamin Harrison. Included are portraits, images from the campaign for his presidency, political cartoons, scenes of Harrison with his Cabinet, photographs from a duck hunting trip and of Harrison's funeral, and images of his birthplace in Ohio and residences in Indianapolis. The collection is arranged into eight series as detailed below.

Series 1, Cabinet Card Portraits: This series is composed of six cabinet card portraits of Benjamin Harrison, including one composite photograph that also shows Vice President Levi P. Morton.

Series 2, Other Individual Portraits: This series contains portraits of Harrison in formats other than the cabinet card. Also included are two pages from periodicals with images of Harrison's wife, Caroline.

Series 3, Campaign Images: This series consists of a photograph of the committee that notified Harrison of his nomination as well as photographs of people campaigning for Harrison. Also included are pages from Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper from 1888 with campaign and post-election illustrations.

Series 4, Political Cartoons: This series is composed of one pencil drawing that depicts Harrison and Grover Cleveland, as well as published cartoons featuring Harrison.

Series 5, Harrison and His Cabinet: This series includes a large color lithograph poster with a scene of Harrison and his Cabinet members in his early presidency, a large black-and-white lithograph poster with individual portraits of Harrison and his Cabinet in his early presidency, and a black-and-white photograph of Harrison with his Cabinet at the end of his presidency (some Cabinet posts were filled by different people in the second half of Harrison's presidency).

Series 6, Photograph Album—Bengies Ducking Club, Maryland, March 1891: This series consists of a photograph album of Harrison's duck hunting trip in Bengies, Maryland, on 11–13 March 1891; the album contains five photographs with captions.

Series 7, Funeral, 16–17 March 1901: This series includes two copies each of nine images that were made from glass negatives in the possession of Miss Cathrine F. Carter in 1974, five smaller images, two mounted images, a front page from Collier's Weekly Journal of Current Events, and pages of photographs from Harper's Weekly and Leslie's Weekly.

Series 8, Residences: This series contains images of Harrison's birthplace in North Bend, Ohio; his first residence in Indianapolis on East Vermont Street; and his final residence on Delaware Street in Indianapolis.
