HISTORICAL SKETCH

The Indiana Historical Society held a performance art event in March 2014 entitled 300 in 3. Photographer Tom Styrkowicz was hired to photograph visitors to the Eugene and Marilyn Glick History Center, located at 450 West Ohio Street in Indianapolis. The goal was to take at least 300 portraits in three days.

The photographer set up his studio at the History Center in Lilly Hall on Thursday March 13 and some staff members were photographed to establish the work flow and get the system set up for the next day. Then from Friday, March 14, through Sunday, March 16, 2014, and with staff help, he took photographs of visitors to the History Center.

Participants were asked to "come as you are" or bring props, but above all, to come with an open mind and have fun. After the portraits were taken, the prints were displayed in the History Center for several weeks, then retained by the I.H.S. Library for the archive.

In addition to becoming part of the live exhibition and part of the I.H.S. archives, participants received a free copy of their portraits to take home. Digital copies of each portrait were also retained. The images are now posted on the I.H.S. Facebook page in albums organized by each day for participants to tag, like, and share with family and friends.

A count was kept during the event and on the third day Kim and George Lewis were the 300th participants. Their photographs can be seen in Box 1, Folder 31 with I.H.S. president John Herbst holding the sign "We're #300."

According to his website, the photographer Tom Styrkowicz is based in Kansas City and he photographs people in his studio or on location. He likes to capture the energy, personality, and emotions of people as they are and create on-the-spot exhibitions.

The photographer also published a book chronicling this event entitled 300 in 3. It contains 336 photographs of the 548 people that were taken during this portrait/performance event. The event was a Indiana Historical society/Tom Styrkowicz Production and was sponsored by Gerald and Dorit Paul.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

After the exhibit ended the photographs and release forms were given to the I.H.S. Library along with a DVD. The photographs and forms were not in any particular order. The release forms were given to the library Registrar. The photographs and DVDs are organized into the following series.

Series 1 contains single portraits organized alphabetically by last name.

Series 2 is made up of couples and groups of two or more. Many of these are families with the same last name. There are also groups of friends and family members with different last names. In those cases the names are alphabetically listed within each group.

Series 3 is made up of one master DVD and a user copy DVD. These contain digital images of each person photographed during the three day event. Each digital image has a number but the individuals are not identified by name. There are also images of the photographer and staff at work during the event.
