Birch Bayh: Making a Difference

Robert Blaemire

A remarkable history of one of the most legendary U.S. senators of our time, Birch Bayh: Making a Difference reveals a life and career dedicated to the important issues facing Indiana and the nation, including civil rights and equal rights for women. Born in Terre Haute right before the Great Depression, Birch Bayh served more than 25 years in the Indiana General Assembly and the United States Senate. His influence was seen in landmark legislation over his tenure. Bayh was also the author, chief Senate sponsor and floor leader of the Equal Rights Amendment, and he successfully led the opposition to two Nixon nominees to the Supreme Court.

Piety & Power: Mike Pence and the Taking of the White House

Tom LoBianco

LoBianco, a longtime Pence reporter, crafts a revealing portrait of the real Mike Pence – a politician whose understated style masks a drive for power but also a surprising political acumen. He draws on years of research, more than 100 exclusive interviews with those closest to the vice president, and deep ties both within the Beltway and Indiana state politics. This biography highlights Pence's strained, at times obsequious, relationship with Trump, his marriage to Karen, his deeply repressed personality, his presidential aspirations and plans for America's future, and his deep-rooted faith in his country, in God, and ultimately himself.

Extra Innings: My Life in Baseball

Max Schumacher and Mark Montieth

Max Schumacher began working for the Indianapolis Indians Triple-A baseball team in 1958 and became the general manager in 1961. The Indians have been one of America's premier minor league franchises ever since, presenting unforgettable stars and moments while playing in historic ballparks. In this retrospective, Schumacher recalls his upbringing in Indianapolis that inspired his love for baseball and shaped his working career, as well as stories that are unique to minor league baseball. Minor league baseball provides the heart and soul of the sport, and the Indianapolis Indians have been a leader within minor league baseball for well over a century. This book provides an inside account of their past 50 years, from the man who directed and witnessed their fortunes.

Abe's Youth: Shaping the Future President

William E. Bartelt and Joshua A. Claybourn

Although Lincoln's adult life has been well documented and analyzed, most biographers have regarded his early years as inconsequential to his career and accomplishments. In 1920, the Lincoln Inquiry was formed to give Lincoln's formative years their due. Abe's Youth, the first fully annotated edition of the Lincoln Inquiry papers, offers indispensable reading for anyone hoping to learn about Lincoln's early life.

Indiana Originals: Hoosiers, Heroes & Heroines

Ray E. Boomhower

Hoosier history overflows with bold visionaries, noble heroes and lovable rogues. May Wright Sewall struggled to uplift womankind and unflinchingly called for peace in a world sleepwalking toward conflict. In the guise of Abe Martin, Kin Hubbard graced the Indianapolis News's back page for 26 years with folksy humor. Combat photographer John A. Bushemi bravely faced the terrors of war and perished capturing its violence. Audacious automotive pioneer Carl G. Fisher went to any length to promote himself, even flying a car via a hot air balloon. Author Ray E. Boomhower, the dean of Hoosier biographers, brings together 40 of the most notable figures from the 19th state.

Pickin' Cotton on the Way to Church: The Life and Work of Father Boniface Hardin, OSB

Nancy Van Note Chism

Excluded from the seminaries in Kentucky because of his race, Father Boniface Hardin enrolled in Saint Meinrad Seminary in Spencer County, Indiana, and took his vows as a Benedictine monk. In 1965, he accepted the position of associate pastor at Holy Angels Catholic Church in Indianapolis. Father Hardin was a social activist who spoke out against poverty, segregation and police brutality – actions that were considered inappropriate for a priest. Along with Sister Jane Shilling, he opened the Martin Center, where they advocated full time for the poor and disenfranchised. They also co- founded Martin University, the only predominately African American institution of higher learning in Indiana.

Last Press Bus Out of Middletown: A Memoir

Bob Hammel

In Last Press Bus Out of Middletown, Hammel tells the story of how an Indiana sports journalist without a college degree, armed with talent, gumption and a whole lot of inspiration and advice from those he worked with, earned national attention while still working for his small-town newspaper. From Bob Knight to Mark Spitz, from the horrors of the Munich Olympics tragedy to the Hoosiers' exhilarating clinching of the NCAA basketball championship, Bob Hammel's journey has been unforgettable. Even in his 80s, it's a dream that still has him smiling and storytelling.

The Kimberlins Go to War: A Union Family in Copperhead Country

Michael B. Murphy

As July 7, 1861, dawned, war was in the air in Lexington, Indiana. The county seat of Scott County was abuzz with the latest news of the southern rebellion. Although Scott County had been rife with sympathy and support for the South, answering the call to serve the Union cause from the county were Jacob T. Kimberlin, his older brother, John J. and three of his cousins. This is the story of the Kimberlin Family that sent 33 fathers and sons, brothers and cousins, to fight for the Union during the Civil War. Ten family members were killed, wounded or died of battlefield disease, a 30 percent casualty rate that is unmatched in recorded Scott County history. Of the 134 known deaths of Scott County soldiers, 10 were members of the Kimberlin clan.

The Life and Art of Felrath Hines: From Dark to Light

Rachel Berenson Perry

Featuring exquisite color photographs, The Life and Art of Felrath Hines explores the life, work and artistic significance of Felrath Hines. Hines, the first African American man to become a professional conservator for the Smithsonian National Portrait Gallery, was born and raised in the segregated Midwest. While growing up, Hines was encouraged by his seamstress mother to pursue his early passion for art by taking Saturday classes at Herron Art Institute in Indianapolis. This book chronicles the life of this exceptional artist who overcame numerous obstacles throughout his career and refused to be pigeonholed by his race.

The Education of Alice Hamilton: From Fort Wayne to Harvard

Matthew Ringenberg

As the founder of the Occupational Safety and Health Act and the first woman faculty member of Harvard University, Alice Hamilton will be remembered for her contributions to public health and her remarkable career. Born and raised in Fort Wayne, Hamilton attended several medical schools contributing to her lifelong dedication to learning. Focusing on the investigation of the health and safety conditions – or rather lack thereof – in the nation’s factories and mines during the second decade of the 20th century, her discoveries led to factory and mine level-initiated reforms, and to city, state and federal reform legislation. They also led to a greater recognition in the nation’s universities for formal academic programs in industrial and public health. In 1919, Harvard officials considered Hamilton the best qualified person in the country to lead their effort in this area.

Thomas Lincoln: Abraham's Father

Daniel Cravens Taylor

Hundreds of books have been written – and are still being written – about Abraham Lincoln. But in the annals of Lincoln history, Thomas Lincoln, Abraham’s father, is a largely neglected figure. He rates a few paragraphs in an otherwise large biography and has served as a quick backdrop to the birth and childhood of our 16th president. This is the first complete biography of Thomas Lincoln to come to market, dealing with the known details of Thomas’ life and placing him in the time and culture in which he lived.

Sleeping in Dixie's Feather Bed: Growing Up White in the Segregated South

Lou Ellen Watts

How do cultural teachings affect a person’s life? Can they be changed through experience and education? Should we even want to change them and to what extent? Sleeping in Dixie's Feather Bed is a story of how this talented young lady living in the 1940s, 50s and 60s, became aware of the Civil Rights movement after having grown up mostly oblivious to the varieties of racial identities around her. At a multiracial camp, she experienced a new view of equality that continued when she moved to Indiana.

Elizabeth Barrett Browning, Illuminated by The Message

Joyce Brinkman

While nonbelievers might invoke God to fit the times, Elizabeth Barrett Browning was more inclined to stretch the fabric of Victorian literary convention. She broached subjects that most thought unfeminine material, not only referencing God and quoting scripture but also carrying scriptural principles into her writing on what was considered at her time a proper subject matter only for men: politics. In this volume of Literary Portals to Prayer, each verso (left) page contains an excerpt from one of Browning's works and the opposite recto (right) page illuminates the selection with a Bible verse from The Message: The Bible in Contemporary Language by Eugene H. Peterson.

Warrior Woman: The Exceptional Life Story of Nonhelema, Shawnee Indian Woman Chief

Dark Rain Thom and James Alexander Thom

Literate, lovely and imposing at more than 6 feet tall, Nonhelema was the Women's Peace Chief of the Shawnee Nation – and already a legend when the most decisive decade of her life began in 1774. That fall, with more than 3,000 Virginians poised to march into the Shawnee's home, Nonhelema's plea for peace was denied, so she loyally became a fighter, riding into battle covered in war paint. When the Indians ran low on ammunition, Nonhelema's role changed back to peacemaker, this time tragically. Negotiating an armistice with military leaders of the American Revolution like Daniel Boone and George Rogers Clark, she found herself estranged from her own people – and betrayed by her white adversaries.

Faith and Fury: Eli Farmer on the Frontier, 1794–1881

Riley B. Case

Some of America's political and social identity today can be traced to the early frontier. After 1801, religion exploded across settlements in the Old Northwest and Kentucky. Not only were souls saved through camp meetings, but regular people also began applying the words "equal" and "independent" to themselves. The life of Eli P. Farmer – a circuit-riding preacher, politician, farmer and businessman – is instructive. His autobiography includes accounts of Native Americans, brawls, flatboats, settlers and revival meetings. Setting his story within the context of the Second Great Awakening, author Riley B. Case shows how Farmer's life personified this religious movement, which gave birth to American evangelicalism, as well as values that would become idyllic to many Americans – self-sufficiency and individualism.

Indiana Avenue was traditionally the host to some of America's premier, world-renown entertainment icons in various genres. Along this winding, brightly lit thoroughfare were nightclubs, lounges, supper clubs, taverns, juke joints and holes-in-the-wall that celebrated the best of the best in entertainment that America had to offer, from the 1920s on into the 1970s. On the bandstand at Denver Ferguson's Sunset Terrace Ballroom, the elegantly attired crooner Nat King Cole delivered his signature song "Mona Lisa." Nearby, B.B. King sang his 1973 down-home blues classic "To Know You is to Love You." At Tuffy Mitchell's Pink Poodle nightclub, "Moms" Mabley made the audience roar with laughter during her sidesplitting comedy routine.

B Inspired

Brandon Warren

In May 2017, Brandon Warren was forced into activism after the loss of his friend to gun violence, but many times he had to first find himself before finding others. Brandon says "You don't have to be a millionaire, a highly educated individual, or a superhero to make a difference in our society. You just have to be someone who cares and is willing to take the necessary risks to speak up and speak out on issues that matter."
