HISTORY OF THE COUNTY HISTORIAN PROGRAM

In 1981, through an effort to improve the historical communication network in the state, the Indiana Historical Society and the Indiana Historical Bureau established the Indiana County Historian Program. Local historical organizations in each county nominated county historians to renewable, two-year terms.

In 1998, the program initiated a process to make the renewable county historian position three years in duration. The Indiana Historical Society and the Indiana Historical Bureau appoint the nominees as official county historians.

COUNTY HISTORIAN JOB DESCRIPTION

Purpose

County historians serve as volunteers appointed by the Indiana Historical Society (IHS) and Indiana Historical Bureau (IHB) to promote local history in their counties, connect individuals and groups with history resources, promote collaboration between local history organizations, and maintain connections with the Indiana Historical Society and Indiana Historical Bureau.

The position of county historian is a voluntary, working position. No funds are available for salary or expenses.

Responsibilities

- Respond in a timely manner to inquiries from individuals and organizations and connect them with the appropriate resources.*
- Conduct historical research as needed for any projects the county historian wishes to undertake, or upon request by the IHS or IHB.
- Maintain connections with all historical entities in the county and encourage cooperation between these organizations.
- Maintain contact with the IHS and IHB and respond to any requests for information.
- Keep records of county historian work, including tracking contacts, submitting reports as requested, and responding to the annual county historian survey.
- Attend county historian training opportunities and meetings.
- Monitor and report the condition of markers for the IHB and encourage the marking of worthy sites; promote historical marker dedications.
- Provide input to the county records commission and the Indiana State Archives to assure the proper disposition of local public records and notify the Indiana State Archives regarding illegal destruction of public records.
- Maintain a personal handbook of information about statewide and local history resources. County historians should pass along their handbooks to successors.
- Notify the IHS Local History Services department of any newly-formed or closed historical organizations in their county, as well as any changes in contact information.
- Other duties as required.

In addition to the responsibilities listed above, the county historian may also engage in other activities that interest them and meet needs in the community.

Fulfilling research requests for the public is not required of county historians but may be carried out at their discretion.*

Qualifications

- Well-acquainted with and interested in the county and its history.
- Available for contact.
- Willing to communicate via email.
- Able to travel within the county.

- Willing to devote time and effort to learning new methods, technologies, and sources of information.
- Courteous, professional, and personable when dealing with the public, as well as dependable and punctual.

If the county historian does not have an email address, the IHS Local History Services department can help them to set up an account.*

Term of Appointment

County historians are appointed to 3-year terms, and may be reappointed to additional terms. If for some reason a county historian cannot complete their term, they may retire at any time.

If a county historian is appointed to fill a position vacated mid-term by a previous county historian, the new county historian will fill the remainder of the current term and then be eligible for re-nomination for a new 3-year term.

Time Commitment

The amount of time a county historian will spend in their work varies greatly depending on the activities in which they choose to participate. At minimum, a county historian should plan to spend at least one hour or more per week dedicated to county historian work.

Support

County historians have access to training, annual meetings, a guidebook, and the following resources:

- Stationery, business cards, and address labels.
- A county historian name badge.
- Contact tracking sheet.
- The County Historian Update monthly e-newsletter.

A mentor will be assigned to each newly appointed county historian. In addition, staff at the IHS and IHB are available for questions and assistance.

Benefits

- Complimentary membership to the Indiana Historical Society for the duration of the county historian appointment.
- Network with county historians across the state.
- Updates on history resources and news.
- Connections with statewide heritage organizations.

Thank you for your dedication to supporting local history!

STANDARDS OF CONDUCT

Commitment

County historians should take seriously their commitment to their work and should be reliable, arriving on time for meetings, responding promptly to inquiries, and fulfilling all responsibilities.

Professionalism

As representatives of the IHS and IHB, county historians should conduct themselves at all times in a manner that reflects positively on the County Historian Program.

Customer Service

All county historians should interact with the public in a friendly and courteous manner and should work towards maintaining positive and amicable relationships with all historical entities.

Non-Discrimination

Discrimination is any negative action or attitude directed toward someone because of certain characteristics and will not be tolerated under any circumstance. These characteristics may include, but are not necessarily limited to race, gender, age, religion, ethnicity or national origin, disability or medical condition, gender identity or sexual orientation.

When a Problem Arises

If a problem arises and the county historian is unable to resolve it with the party involved, the county historian should contact the IHS Local History Services department or the IHB to discuss the issue. (See page 2 for contact information)

CODE OF ETHICS

Trust and Integrity

County historians occupy a position of trust in their communities and should practice their work with integrity, following these guidelines:

- Avoid plagiarism and copyright infringement: Document and acknowledge all sources, and accurately represent the findings of colleagues. Do not use photos, images, or other forms of intellectual property without appropriate permissions, unless they are in the public domain.
- Do not fabricate evidence: Honor the integrity of the historical record and do not invent, alter, ignore, remove or destroy evidence of any kind.
- Do not misrepresent credentials: Represent all professional qualifications accurately and fully.
- Consider multiple perspectives: No single account can tell the whole story, so multiple – and sometimes conflicting – accounts should always be considered in the pursuit of history. Be culturally inclusive in all historical practices.
- Have a point of view but be aware of personal biases: When forming conclusions, follow sound historical methods, correctly represent sources, and do not omit evidence that opposes personal interpretations.

Navigating Sensitive Issues

Although the pursuit and study of history prompts critical dialogue, county historians must navigate sensitive issues with care and avoid inflaming dialogue, antagonism, and disparagement. This would include offering political opinions or commentary while acting within their official capacity.

Avoiding Conflicts of Interest

County historians should avoid situations in which they or organizations with which they are associated could be compromised and avoid any action that may create even the appearance of impropriety.

- County historians shall not give any certificate, statement, or appraisal as to the monetary value of historical materials. (Refer individuals making such requests to the American Society of Appraisers - www.appraisers.org)
- County historians should not use their position to promote their personal collecting activities. When collecting historical items similar to those collected by local historical organizations or the IHS, county historians should consider the needs of those organizations.
- County historians should recuse themselves from any situation in which a conflict of interest or the appearance thereof arises; for example, review of work or awarding of prizes to anyone with whom the county historian has a personal connection.

APPOINTMENT AND RETIREMENT PROCEDURES

County Historian Terms

County historians are appointed to 3-year terms and are eligible for renomination at the end of their term. Each county is set on a fixed election cycle so that approximately 30 counties come up for renomination each year. If a county historian retires mid-term, the new county historian will serve the remainder of the existing term and then be eligible for renomination at the end of that term.

Nomination

Upon the retirement of a county historian, the IHS Local History Services department will seek nominations for a new county historian. Each local history organization and public library in that county will receive a letter and nomination form, and ideally, these organizations will work together or create a joint nominating committee to select one person to nominate for the position. Required forms for nomination of a new county historian must include a completed nomination form and a resume for the nominee.

Once the nomination form and resume are received by the IHS Local History Services department, they will be reviewed jointly by the IHS and IHB, and recommendations will be made regarding appointment. If the nominee is approved, they will be sent a letter inviting them to become county historian. Once they accept, they will be officially appointed.

Multiple nominations for a single position

If multiple candidates are nominated for a county historian position, the IHS Local History Services department and the IHB will select the county historian, taking into account the qualifications submitted by the nominating organizations.

New Appointment

When the nomination process is complete and the appointment is official, new county historians will receive a packet of materials and information, including letterhead, envelopes, return address labels, business cards, a lapel pin, nametag, certificate of appointment, a copy of this guide, and an informational survey requesting more information about the county historian and their interests. The county historian will receive separate information regarding their IHS membership.

The county historian's contact information will be listed on the IHS website (www.indianahistory.org/across-indiana/hometown-resources/find-who-you-need-by-county), and they will be signed up to receive the monthly county historian e-newsletter, The Update (see page 9 for details).

Notification of the new county historian appointment will be sent to local history organizations, libraries, county commissioners, county council, and the mayor or town council of the county seat.

Reappointment

At the end of the current 3-year term cycle, county historians will be eligible for renomination. In the autumn preceding the end of the term, the IHS Local History Services department will contact the county historians who are up for renomination to ask whether they are willing to serve another term if reappointed or wish to retire.

If a county historian seeks reappointment, the IHS Local History Services department will contact each local historical society and public library in that county and notify them that the county historian will serve another term if reappointed and request a renomination. Local organizations are instructed to work together to renominate, and only nominate a new county historian if they can provide justifiable cause to remove the current county historian. Once renominations have been received, the county historian will be appointed to a new 3-year term.

Retirement

If a county historian is unable to complete his or her term, they should contact the IHS Local History Services department to notify of their retirement. The county historian will then be retired from the position effective immediately, and the local history organizations and libraries in the county will be contacted to begin the new appointment process (see above for details).

County Historian Emeritus/Emerita

If a county historian has served at least one full 3-year term and wishes to retire but still be involved with local history, they may request to become county historian emeritus/emera in their county. The IHS and IHB may also move a county historian to emeritus/emera status at their discretion.

The retiring county historian should make the request to become an emeritus/emera to the IHS Local History Services department when they give notice of their retirement. County historian emeriti will be appointed at the discretion of the IHS and IHB. County historian emeriti will not receive complimentary IHS membership and will not be listed on the website but will continue to receive The Update e-newsletter and may attend county historian meetings. There are no term limits for county historian emeriti.

ASSOCIATE COUNTY HISTORIANS

A county historian may, at their discretion, assign associate county historians to assist in the work of local history. While of great service and assistance, these associates are not officially appointed, should not be called Indiana County Historians, and their contact information won't be listed on the IHS website; however, they may receive the County Historian Update e-newsletter and can attend county historian meetings. For more information or to assign an associate in your county, contact IHS Local History Services.

COUNTY HISTORIAN MENTORS

Current county historians who have served at least one 3-year term may request to become mentors to newly appointed county historians from different counties. Mentors are assigned at the discretion of the IHS and IHB and can serve to answer any questions an incoming county historian might have and offer guidance regarding the work of county historians. When a county historian is first appointed, they will be provided with the contact information of their mentor and introduced to them via email. County historian mentorship is intended to provide a system of support for incoming county historians and strengthen ties between historians statewide.

COUNTY HISTORIAN RESOURCES

Materials

When appointed, county historians will receive the following resources:

- Nametag and lapel pin
- Business cards
- Letterhead, blank envelopes and return address labels
- Contact tracking sheets

If you run out of any of the above, please contact the IHS Local History Services department (see contact information on page 2) to receive a refill of these materials.

Indiana Historical Society Membership

County historians will receive a complimentary membership to the IHS for the duration of their appointment. Once appointed, you will receive information regarding your new membership.

E-Newsletters

THE UPDATE county historian e-newsletter is written and circulated to county historians on the first day of each month. The e-newsletter will arrive at the email address you provided to the IHS Local History Services department. The main purpose is to share news relative to the County Historian Program, workshop and program opportunities around the state, stories about county historians and the various projects they undertake, and other resources. County historians are encouraged to submit announcements about their work as well as notes of interest relative to their activities.

COMMUNIQUE ONLINE is a weekly e-newsletter available free of charge from the IHS Local History Services department. It contains up-to-date news of current resources and happenings in the field, programs and events occurring in Indiana's local heritage organizations, and other news and updates. Subscription is free. To subscribe, email col@indianahistory.org requesting to be added to the mailing list.

COLLECTIONS ADVISOR is a monthly e-newsletter available free of charge from the IHS Local History Services department that contains articles, tips and stories related to collections management and care. To subscribe, email collectionsadvisor@indianahistory.org requesting to be added to the mailing list.

THE INDIANA HISTORICAL BUREAU PRIMARY SOURCE is a quarterly e-newsletter from the IHB. It contains articles and information about activities around the state. Subscription is free and open to anyone with an email account. To subscribe, email IHB@library.in.gov requesting to be added to the mailing list.

County Historian Facebook Group

County historians may join the private county historian Facebook group, which is available for county historians to share resources and news. Email the IHS Local History Services department to join.

Lending Resource Center

The IHS Local History Services department maintains the Lending Resource Center to loan books, leaflets, and videos on a range of topics of interest to historical societies, libraries, genealogical groups, and others. Visit <https://indianahistory.org/across-indiana/local-history-services/online-resources/> for more information about available materials and instructions to borrow items.

GETTING STARTED CHECKLIST

If you are getting started as a newly-appointed county historian, you can use this checklist to begin to organize your work.

- Read the County Historian Program Guide.
- Plan to attend county historian training in person or online.
- Start a calendar to keep track of meetings and important dates.
- Save your contact tracking sheets to your computer or print out copies to begin tracking contacts.
- If possible, get in touch with the former county historian in your county to obtain any notes, handbook, advice, and other information to help you in your work.
- Contact your assigned mentor for advice on getting started.
- Connect with each historical organization and library in your county to get to know who the appropriate contacts are for each location and where the local history repositories are kept for various resources.
- Begin to compile a personal handbook about local and statewide history resources (or add to an existing handbook if you received one from your predecessor).
- Plan to attend meetings at local history organizations, and/or serve on boards or committees.
- Learn where the historical markers are in your county and check on their condition.
- Join the county historian Facebook group, if desired.

SAMPLE COUNTY HISTORIAN ACTIVITIES

The following are examples of activities county historians have undertaken in their locales. These examples are by no means required, but rather are provided to give new county historians ideas of possible projects which may need attention in their own counties. In many cases, these activities can be carried out through collaboration with local history organizations.

Programs

- Guide a tour, such as a downtown walking tour, a lost landmarks tour, a bus tour, or a cemetery walk.
- Lead a book discussion on a historical work.
- Organize a game program or trivia night using historical questions about the county.
- Hold a program about a famous (or infamous) event or person in your county's history.
- Give a workshop to adults or create a special session for children about researching historical topics in the county, or about conducting genealogy.
- Cooperate with the local school system to give an in-class presentation about conducting research on relatives in other countries in conjunction with students' studies on cultures or ethnicity.
- Offer a session on conducting genealogy in a cemetery. Show participants what information gravestones provide and how to correlate that information with records in the courthouse.

Publications and Social Media

- Write a weekly/monthly column for your local newspaper.
- Start a new county historian Facebook page, or contribute to the Facebook page(s) of local history organization(s).
- Feature people, sites, or events in your county that are significant but may have been overlooked or forgotten. Conduct some research on a local historical myth and help separate fact and fiction by proving or disproving it.
- Submit topic ideas to the Indiana Historical Bureau for inclusion in the blog, newsletter, almanac, and/or social media.

Records

- Connect with local history organizations and libraries to assist in carrying out needed projects, such as:
 - Read through old newspapers and abstract the obituaries, citing the papers and their dates.
 - Compile information from early tax lists into a single document.
 - Create an alphabetical index for your county census records.
 - Move delicate records to acid-free folders and archival containers.
 - Copy on acid-free paper deed, birth, marriage, and death records. Create indexes for these records if none exist.
 - Compile the records for the veterans in your county who served in the military.
 - Transcribe diaries.
- Make a list of the locations of all cemeteries in your county and where records, reference and county history books, and newspapers are stored.

Cemeteries

- Identify an abandoned cemetery and find a local group to maintain the site.
- Survey your township/county cemeteries and compile the information on the gravestones into a single document. Update the information 5 or 10 years later.
- Make and update maps of the county cemeteries. Create an index of where all individuals are buried.

Miscellaneous

- Judge National History Day in Indiana projects at competitions taking place in your county or region.
- Identify a historic building worth saving and raise money for its restoration.
- Write letters of support for historic preservation grants.
- Update Wikipedia pages pertaining to your county's history with correct information.
- Encourage local groups to write their histories.
- Work with a senior-level Girl or Boy Scout troop on a preservation or indexing project of county records.
- Ask local citizens to write their memories for a newspaper series.
- Conduct oral histories with local citizens.

TRAINING AND MEETINGS

Workshops and Webinars

County historians receive training through regional workshops covering historical research, writing, available resources, communication, and current issues in the history field. Dates and locations for these workshops will be announced when scheduled. Webinars covering these topics will also be made available.

The Annual Roundtable

Each spring, an annual meeting of county historians is held in Indianapolis. The meeting offers a mix of presentations on topics such as historical research or current issues in the field, as well as the opportunity for county historians to share their recent activities and ask questions of one another to help further their work. The annual roundtable is a great time to share, connect with other historians, and learn about what is happening statewide. Invitations for the roundtable go out approximately one month in advance of the roundtable, and RSVPs are required.

Regional Meetings

In the autumn, local small group county historian meetings are held around the state. In 2020, the fall training workshops will replace the regional meetings, but regional meetings will resume again in the future. These meetings will serve three purposes: better meet county historians' needs, solidify IHS and IHB-county historian relationships, and encourage closer relationships among neighboring county historians themselves.

Other Training Opportunities

The IHS Local History Services department offers regular training opportunities for museums and heritage organizations, and county historians are welcome to register at the member rate.

RECORDING COUNTY HISTORIAN CONTACTS

It is important that county historians keep track of the contacts they make through their county historian activities. This is important information that will be requested on the annual survey (see page 17 for details) and is used to help support the County Historian Program.

County historians should track the number of people whom they help via email, phone, in-person, or mail, and they should include in their count the individuals they refer to other people for assistance. Keeping track of contacts can be as simple as recording basic numbers in the weekly tracking log (see page 16). For more detailed records (recommended), county historians can also use the weekly contact sheet (see page 15).

These forms are also available in a digital format and in a spreadsheet; contact the IHS Local History Services department for the digital files. County historians may, of course, devise their own system for record-keeping.

SURVEYS AND REPORTS

Annual Survey

The annual survey is sent to county historians early each year and allows the IHS and IHB to keep a record of how county historians spend their time and to determine how their roles and responsibilities in the community change over time. The report records the amount of time county historians spend in their position each year, how that time is spent, and the resources available to them. Although many county historians are staff members or volunteers of historical organizations, they are asked to consider when answering the survey only those activities in which they participate specifically in their roles as county historians.

In addition to creating a record of historians' activities, the survey allows the IHS and IHB to determine how they can better meet the needs of the county historians through programming, correspondence, and advertisement of county historians' services. Finally, it allows the staff to determine if the County Historian Program is meeting its goals.

Biannual Report

Mid-year, county historians will be asked to complete a short report summarizing their major activities over the past 6 months and provide updated contact information for the history entities in their county. This information will help the IHS and IHB to stay informed of the work of county historians statewide and update records on local history organizations.

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

Who do I contact if I have a question about the county historian program?

Contact the Indiana Historical Society Local History Services Department at (317)234-0170 or localhistoryservices@indianahistory.org.

How do I find out who the county historian is for a particular county?

A directory of county historians is maintained by Local History Services and can be found at www.indianahistory.org/across-indiana/hometown-resources/find-who-you-need-by-county.

Who are the county historians?

Anyone who is well acquainted with the county and its history, able to travel in the county, available for contact and interested in local history. County historians are full-time teachers, dry cleaners, attorneys, librarians, farmers, history professors, stay-at-home parents and retired citizens. While some county historians have advanced degrees in history, the majority are high school graduates or have bachelor's degrees in subjects unrelated to history.

How are county historians chosen?

Local historical organizations in each county nominate county historians to renewable three-year terms. The Indiana Historical Society and the Indiana Historical Bureau appoint the nominees as official county historians.

Are county historians paid?

No. County historians are volunteers and receive no compensation for their work. However, county historians can charge their patrons for postage or time spent researching the answer to a query. When responding to a request initially, county historians should make sure any fee expectations are fully explained. At a minimum, county historians are expected to reply to a request for help with a list of resources available in the area which may include paid researchers (including the county historian, if desired). Clients can then make informed decisions about how they would like to proceed with their request. Many county historians are affiliated with organizations that provide various forms of support, such as postage, use of a computer or office space. Requests and circumstances may vary for each county historian, and no specific guideline fits all situations.

May county historians initiate other programs to meet historical needs in their communities?

Absolutely! County historians are encouraged to take stock of the historical needs in their counties and address them as they develop. Examples of projects county historians have begun are cemetery restoration and mapping, fund-raising for restoration of historical buildings, indexing records, compiling and indexing obituaries from old newspapers, offering genealogy or cemetery restoration workshops, and partnering with schools for programs on history, genealogy or ethnic studies.
