BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH

Benjamin Harrison (1833-1901), twenty-third President of the United States, was born in North Bend, Ohio, the son of John Scott Harrison and Elizabeth Irwin. He was the grandson of President William Henry Harrison and the great grandson of Benjamin Harrison, member of the Continental Congress and signer of the Declaration of Independence.

Harrison attended Farmers College in Cincinnati, then transferred to Miami University in Oxford, Ohio, from which he graduated in 1852. For the next two years he studied law with a Cincinnati firm, Storer and Gwynne, and in 1853 married his first wife, Caroline Lavinia Scott. He had two children by this marriage, Russell B. and Mary (Mrs. James R. McKee). In 1854 he moved to Indianapolis and began to build up a law practice. He became an active Republican as soon as that party was started, served as secretary of the central state committee, and was elected, first city attorney, 1857, and then reporter of the state Supreme Court.

In 1862 Harrison was appointed colonel of the 70th Indiana Regiment, which served in Tennessee, in the Atlanta campaign, and in the Carolinas. He returned to his legal practice, working with a succession of partners. In 1876 he ran for Governor of Indiana, but was defeated by the Democratic candidate, "Blue Jeans" Williams. From 1879 to 1881 he was a member of the Mississippi River Commission. In 1881 he was admitted to practice before the U.S. Supreme Court and also elected Senator from Indiana. During his single term he was chairman of the committee on territories; espoused fair and effective railroad regulation; supported general pension legislation to replace the individual bills then the practice; and championed the work of the Mississippi River Commission.

In 1888 he was nominated for President on the eighth ballot as a compromise candidate between James G. Blaine and Chester A. Arthur. He won in the electoral college though not in the popular vote. He appointed Blaine his Secretary of State, and the latter embarked upon a "spirited foreign policy" which included a dispute with Germany over Samoa, the proposed annexation of Hawaii, a dispute with Chile, and a brilliantly conducted Pan-American Congress.

Harrison, elected on a platform favoring Civil Service reform, was nevertheless criticized for making political appointments. In practice he respected the classified list, and expanded it from approximately 27,000 to 38,000 positions. Important legislation passed during his Presidency included the McKinley Tariff, the Sherman Anti-Trust Act, statehood for six Western states, and the opening of Oklahoma to settlement. A number of factors caused him to fail of reelection in 1892.

Harrison was a devoted churchman, taught Sunday School at the First Presbyterian Church, and supported progressive ideas in the church as a whole.

The Harrison family was a good deal in evidence during his sojourn in the White House. President Harrison showed an especial fondness for his grandson, "Baby McKee" [Benjamin H. McKee]. His daughter, Mary McKee, was often there. Mrs. Harrison's niece, Mary Scott Dimmick, seems to have acted as a sort of secretary. Caroline Scott Harrison died in 1892. In 1896 Harrison married Mrs. Dimmick (Mary Lord Harrison), and had a daughter, Elizabeth (Walker).

In 1893 Harrison returned to Indianapolis and resumed his law practice. He represented Venezuela successfully in the arbitration of that country's boundary dispute with Great Britain in 1899. He also did a good deal of writing. At the suggestion of Edward W. Bok, editor of the "Ladies Home Journal," he wrote a series of articles on the nature of the federal government and the duties of a President. These were published as "This Country of Ours" in 1897.

Caroline (Carrie) Lavinia Scott Harrison was born 1 October 1832 in Oxford, Ohio the third daughter of John Witherspoon Scott and Mary Potts Neal. Her father was a Presbyterian minister and professor of mathematics and natural science at Miami University. She attended Oxford Female Institute, where in her senior year (1851-52) she was listed among the faculty as an assistant in piano music. Following graduation, she taught music for one year in a girls school in Carrollton, Kentucky. On October 20, 1853 she married Benjamin Harrison. Together they had three children Russell B. (1854) Mary Scott (1858) and a daughter who died at birth in 1861.

Caroline Scott Harrison was an accomplished pianist and artist and is noted for her painting of flowers on china. For thirty years (1860-90) she served on the Board of Managers of the Indianapolis Orphans Asylum (Records of this organization can be found in M66), was active with the Presbyterian Church, a leader in the Ladies Patriotic Association and Ladies Sanitary Committee. During the presidential years she was active in local and national charities, such as the Aid Society of Garfield Hospital and the Washington City Orphan Asylum. She became the first president-general of the Daughters of the American Revolution when it was organized in 1890, and was active in the restoration and maintenance of the White House. She died 25 October 1892 in the White House and is buried in Crown Hill Cemetery in Indianapolis.

Mary Scott [Lord] Dimmick Harrison was born in Honesdale, Pennsylvania in 1858, the daughter of Russell Farnham Lord and Elizabeth Mayhew Scott. Her father was chief engineer of the Delaware and Hudson Canal. She attended a private school in Princeton, NJ and Elmira College in NY. In 1881 she married Walter Erskine Dimmick, a son of the attorney-general of Pennsylvania; he died six weeks after the wedding. During the presidency of Benjamin Harrison (1889-1893) she was a frequent guest at the White House, finally being persuaded by her aunt, (Caroline Scott Harrison) to live with them.

On 6 April 1896 Mrs. Dimmick married Benjamin Harrison at St. Thomas Protestant Episcopal Church in New York City. During the next five years the couple travelled widely, partly because of Harrison's role in settling the Venezuelan boundary dispute and as a delegate at the Hague Peace Conference. They had one daughter Elizabeth (b. 1897) who studied law and was admitted to the bar of both Indiana and New York. She married James Blaine Walker, Jr.

After 1913 Mary Lord Harrison moved to New York with her daughter. During WWI she directed the entertainment bureau of the Officers Service Department of the New York War Camp Community Service, and served for more than 25 years as treasurer of the Committee of One Hundred, a Republican Woman's organization. She died in New York City in 1946, and is buried in Crown Hill Cemetery, Indianapolis.

Mary Scott Harrison McKee was born 3 April 1858, the daughter of Benjamin Harrison and Caroline Lavinia Scott. She was educated in a private academy in Indianapolis and after high school attended Ogontz Seminary in Pennsylvania. In November 1884 she married James Robert McKee and they had two children: Benjamin H. McKee (b. 1887) known as Baby McKee, and Mary Lodge McKee (b. 1888). She was active in organizations in Washington, D.C., New York City and Greenwich, Connecticut and Indianapolis where she was a member of the Caroline Scott Harrison Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Propylaeum, and the Woman's Club.

Mary (Mame/May) S. Saunders, from Nebraska, married Russell B. Harrison (1854-1936) the son of Benjamin and Caroline Scott Harrison in Omaha, Nebraska 1884. They had two children, Marthana (1888-1972) and William Henry (b. 1896).

John Witherspoon Scott, (1800-1892) the father of Caroline Scott Harrison was a Presbyterian Minister and professor of mathematics and natural science at Miami University.
