HISTORICAL SKETCH

Initially called Pioneer Farms, the Centennial Farms project was started in 1947 as joint venture between the Indiana Historical Society and Purdue University to honor families whose farms had belonged to the same family for over 100 years. By July 1947 the number of identifiable farms had amounted to almost 750, with the highest number coming from Rush and Wayne counties. Purdue used its county agricultural agents to help identify centennial families. At that time, the Indiana Historical Society and Indiana Historical Bureau shared offices and staff, and Shirley Snyder (later McCord) of the Historical Bureau verified the information and corresponded with the applicants regarding questions.

Recognition took the form of a certificate awarded at a special ceremony. The certificate contained the Indiana Historical Society's new seal which was commissioned for this event. Other items on the award included the owner's name, township, and county as well as the words "loyalty to the land." Medallions which were either plain or could be engraved with the family's name were available for purchase. These also contained the Society's seal and the words "Centennial Farm Family." They could either be displayed by hanging or on a flat surface.

The awards ceremony took place in May 1948, in conjunction with the Agricultural Conference of State Associations at Purdue. Some 1,200 centennial family farms were recognized at the event. Upon the project's completion in 1951, over 1,650 families had been recognized by the Society for their contribution to the state's history.
