BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH

Charles Edward Snyder (sometimes spelled “Snider”) was born February 1, 1899, probably in Indiana. In May 1917, he joined the Indiana National Guard as a private in Company E, Third Indiana Infantry. His enlistment record lists his profession as “solderer.” In August of 1917, while still a minor, Snyder was legally adopted by Charles A. and Viola Ernsberger of Elkhart, and legally changed his last name to Ernsberger. Ernsberger seems to have been a devoted son, having later written and published a sentimental poem in honor of his mother while serving in the Army. Also in August 1917, the Third Infantry was mobilized as Battery E, 137th Field Artillery in the United States Army. He trained at Camp Shelby in Mississippi, and shipped out to Liverpool in October 1918. As part of Battery E, he served in England and France. Ernsberger traveled home aboard the U.S.S. George Washington, and was honorably discharged from the Army December 23, 1918. On his service record, his commanding officer described PFC Ernsberger’s character as “Excellent.”

Ernsberger married Lelah J.V. Cripe in 1920, and had one son, Francis “Charlie” Ernsberger, born in 1929. Charles and Lelah were both active in the local VFW and the Elkhart Disabled American Veterans organization, and may have attended Bethel United Methodist Church. Though Ernsberger’s death certificate lists his occupation as “truck driver” for the Elkhart Bridge and Iron Company, several pamphlets in the collection indicate that he may have worked as a retail clerk at some point in time. Charles Ernsberger died of complications from Alzheimer’s Disease April 1, 1982 in Elkhart.

Collection Materials
SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

This collection comprises six series. The first includes personal documents: military service records, civilian legal records, family news clippings, correspondence, and a short unpublished story about Charles Ernsberger written by collection donor Greg Lawson. The second series is made up of family portraits, both photographic and drawn. All photographic portraits in this series are of Ernsberger around the time of his service in the First World War, but there are also two drawings of particularly good quality, depicting three unidentified family members.

Military-related printed materials, imagery, and artifacts make up the third, fourth, and fifth series. Printed materials include various pamphlets, song sheets, a 1911 Mess Sergeant’s Handbook, a softcover volume detailing Elkhart’s involvement in the war, and six December 1918 issues of The Hatchet, a daily newsletter published aboard the U.S.S. George Washington. Imagery includes postcards, several group portrait prints of Battery E, 137th Field Artillery, an illustrated roster with individual portraits, and a commemorative roster that has a portrait of Ernsberger and a poem he wrote affixed to the lower corners. Of particular note are three Cirkut panoramas. The series of artifacts includes mostly personal dress and grooming items, but also incorporates items such as a small artillery flag and a gunpowder flask.

The sixth and seventh series hold civilian printed materials and imagery. Printed materials include a 1933 world atlas and assorted booklets and pamphlets, such as a 1911 Home Cyclopedia of Health and a Jehovah’s Witnesses booklet explaining the group’s beliefs about saluting the flag. Graphic materials in the sixth series are mostly postcards depicting various notable buildings in Indiana, but these are also accompanied by a decorative lithograph, a road map, and a poster of President Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

The most useful items in the collection are almost certainly those relating to the U.S. Military and WWI. The military pamphlets, booklets, and newsletters hint at the conduct expected of enlisted men at the time, and the Mess Sergeant’s Handbook provides a very thorough description of ration amounts and field kitchen setup. The panorama of Camp Shelby is of particular interest in that it illustrates in detail a training camp’s overall setup, density, and accommodations. Those researching home remedies, historic Indiana architecture, or the Buck Lake Ranch amusement park may find the civilian materials relevant, and the collection as a whole will be of interest to those researching Ernsberger family history.
