HISTORICAL SKETCH

The Daggett architectural firm of Indianapolis was headed by three generations of the Daggett family, and its work spanned over a century of distinguished work in Indianapolis and the surrounding area. The firm operated under several different names during this long period.

The founder of the firm was Robert Platt Daggett (1837-1915). Born in New Haven, Connecticut, he moved to Indianapolis to found the firm in 1868. He designed well over a hundred residences in Indianapolis and in other cities in Indiana and Illinois, and also business blocks, churches, college buildings, and schools. Among his firm's larger projects were the original Lilly laboratory, the E. C. Atkins saw works and Burford Printing Co., Dean Brothers Pump Works, Park Theater, and Indianapolis High School. The elder Daggett continued in the firm until 1912, when he retired to California.

Robert Frost Daggett (1875-1955), the second generation, was born in Indianapolis. He graduated from Indianapolis High School in 1893, from University of Pennsylvania School of Architecture in 1896, and from the Ecole des Beaux Arts in Paris in 1901. He then joined his father's firm until his work was interrupted by the first World War. Assigned first to the 472nd Aero Squadron, he was then transferred to the Engineers, and was responsible for building many field and base hospitals in France. Returning home, he became the architect for Indiana, Purdue, and DePauw Universities, and designed Jordan Hall at Butler University. He designed several buildings for the Indiana University School of Medicine, as well as Long and Riley Hospitals. His work also included several buildings for Eli Lilly and Co., the Consolidated and Chamber of Commerce Buildings, the Indianapolis Athletic Club, and Tabernacle Presbyterian Church. Though he did comparatively little residential work, he designed the J. K. Lilly and Eli Lilly homes on Sunset Lane.

Robert Frost Daggett, Jr., (1912-1985), the third generation of the firm, graduated from Yale University in 1934, and served in the U. S. Navy in World War II. As he and

F. Harold Naegele joined the firm about 1948, its name changed, first to Robert Frost Daggett and Associates, then to Daggett, Naegele and Daggett, and finally to Daggett, Naegele and Associates. During these later years, the firm continued to do work for the Lilly company and Indiana University. They did several public schools in Indianapolis, notably Westlane Junior High School; LaRue Carter and Community Hospitals and several other hospitals around the state; the Greyhound bus terminal; the Otis Elevator plant in Bloomington; several churches; and several buildings for the Peter Paul Company. The firm was dissolved when the younger Daggett retired in 1977.

SCOPE AND CONTENT

This collection, filling eight manuscript boxes and two oversize boxes, contains correspondence, essays, company records and ledgers, architectural specifications and plans, photographs, brochures and scrapbooks. It covers the period 1869-1977, through three generations of the Daggett firm. It is arranged chronologically by family member, and then by category.

Robert Platt Daggett is represented by the material in Box 1. Folder 1 contains material about the firm, notably a small printed brochure listing buildings designed by the firm, and a typed transcript of an article about the firm. Folders 2-3 contain correspondence and specifications from the firm. In Folder 4 is an 1886 patent for stovepipe flanges and hinges. In Folders 5 and 6 are small floor plans on linen for 181 houses and cottages, in Indianapolis and elsewhere in Indiana and Illinois, most of them dated and identified by owner. Many of these are in addition to the list given in the printed brochure. An alphabetical list of these houses is appended to this collection description. It should be noted that in some cases plans are listed for the same person on different dates. This may indicate a revised plan; in some cases it may mean a second dwelling built for rental; this is particularly likely in the case of several double houses. Almost all of the plans are dated in January and February, presumably so that construction could begin in the spring. One cottage is marked "Not built." In OMB 49 are the front and side elevations of one house, marked "built 1881," and the front elevation of a factory. Also in OMB 49 is a ledger giving a record of jobs done by the Daggett firm between 1880 and 1910, most with summary costs. In Folder 9 of Box 1 is a scrapbook with records of the Indiana chapter of the American Institute of Architects, 1889-1897.

Robert Frost Daggett is represented by materials in Boxes 2 and 6. In Box 2, Folders 1-5 contain correspondence, mainly letters of recommendation from satisfied clients. Folders 6-9 contain Daggett's remarks at the dedication of four buildings he had designed. Folders 10-23 contain papers, lectures, or talks given by Daggett on various occasions. Most of these have to do with architecture and design, and give an unusual insight into an architect's view of his craft. There are also a tribute to Daggett and two clippings.

In Folders 28-29 are summaries of work done by the firm, beginning in 1923. Photographs of work done by the firm, Folders 31-37, are stored in Visual Collections. Ledgers 1911-1933 are in Box 6.

Robert Frost Daggett, Jr. is represented by the material in Boxes 3-5 and 7-8. In Box 3 are his notes on architectural courses taken at the University of Illinois in 1948; a few personal papers; pages from a scrapbook; and photographs of buildings designed by the firm (stored in Visual Collections). In Box 4 are legal papers for the firm; minutes 1951-1977; and material dealing with the purchase and later the sale of their building at 567 Westfield Boulevard in Indianapolis.

Box 5 contains agreements with clients, 1948-1976. In Boxes 7-8 are ledgers 1933-1974. Some pages (Folders 2-14 of Box 8) are numbered by job (e.g. 7502, the second job in 1975). Folders 15-23 of Box 8 contain yearly audits for the firm by accountants.

When the firm was dissolved in 1977, most of its papers were given to the Drawing and Documents Archive at the College of Architecture and Planning at Ball State University in Muncie. A guide to this collection was prepared by Andrew R. Seager in July 1989 (Architectural Projects by the Daggett firm of Indianapolis, ca. 1868-1976-- NA 737 .D24 Ib S42 1989). The collection at Indiana Historical Society may help to amplify the Ball State collection in three ways: by adding to, and dating, the list of houses and other buildings designed by Robert Platt Daggett; by giving an idea of Robert Frost Daggett's views on architecture; and by giving much more material about the last three decades of the firm.
