HISTORICAL SKETCH

Equal Rights Amendment (ERA): Although the Equal Rights Amendment was first introduced in Congress in 1923 and subsequent years, both houses of Congress did not pass the ERA until 1972. When the amendment was sent out to the states with a ratification deadline of March 22, 1979, thirty states ratified within the first year. However, in this time, opposition to the amendment also began to organize and solidify, most notably from Phyllis Schlafly's Eagle Forum/STOP ERA. Hence, the needed eight more ratifications trickled in.

In August 1973, Hoosiers for the Equal Rights Amendment (HERA) was established to stir up public support and lobby lawmakers to pass the amendment after the Equal Rights Amendment was not ratified by the 1973 Indiana General Assembly. The organization disbanded in 1976, as publicity and advocacy efforts were taken over by operatives for the National Organization for Women. The campaign was successful, and the ERA was ratified by the state of Indiana on January 24th, 1977, bringing the count to thirty five states. Chances of getting three more states by the deadline looked grim as tides turned more conservative, so NOW and other pro-ERA groups were able to lobby Congress for an extension. Congress granted an extension until June 30, 1982 and pro-ERA groups re-focused on targeting three more states for ratification.

The International Women's Year (IWY) was created by the United Nations and private organizations to call attention to women's issues in 1977. The national organization that oversaw the year's activities was the National Commission on the Observance of International Women's Year; each state had its own Coordinating Committee which raised funds and served as an outreach point to the community.
