HISTORICAL SKETCH

Located on the northwest corner of Pennsylvania and Market Streets in Indianapolis, the sixteen-floor neoclassical Fletcher Savings and Trust Building was completed in 1915. Planning began in 1912 and was initially to be built by Electus Litchfield, but he was later replaced by the firm of Vonnegut and Bohn.

Initially, the first floor housed the Trust Company's banking and safe deposit areas, the second floor was also used by Fletcher Savings and Trust, while the remaining floors were leased to tenants engaged in other businesses. A 1954 merger resulted in the name changing to American Fletcher National Bank, which was merged into Bank One of Columbus, Ohio in 1986. The building was vacated in 1992. In 2003, the building was opened as the Hilton Garden Inn.
