SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

The collection contains eight papers and one pamphlet related to George Hopkins' service in World War II from January 1945 to July 1946. Hopkins worked as a clerk for the Ordnance Department at Camp Atterbury, Indiana. Two memoranda from the Army Service Forces show that Hopkins satisfactorily completed job relations training for which he received a record of training and two certificates. He earned an efficiency rating of "very good" which entitled him to a promotion and pay raise. His last day of active duty was June 30, 1946, and his position was subsequently terminated. Hopkins received a pamphlet published by the War Department entitled "To Civilians Leaving the War Department" which addresses such issues as reduction in force regulations, lump-sum leave payments, retirement refunds, and social security taxation.
