BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH

The collection centers on correspondence from politicians, attorneys and other important individuals to two primary individuals: Oliver H. Smith and John Law.

O. H. (Oliver Hampton) Smith (1794–1859) was born in New Jersey but moved to Lawrenceburg, Indiana. He studied law and began practicing in Connersville, Indiana, in 1820. He soon entered politics as a member of the Whig Party and served in the State house of representatives from 1822–1824; prosecuting attorney for third judicial district, 1824–1825; U. S. House of Representatives, 1827–1829; and U. S. Senate from 1837–1843. After failing in his bid for reelection to the Senate, Smith moved to Indianapolis where he resumed his law practice and was involved in the city’s railroad development.

John Love (1820-1881) was born in Culpeper County, Virginia, the son of Richard H. Love and of a granddaughter of Richard Henry Lee. Love attended West Point from 1837 to 1841, and then embarked on a military career. He fought in the war with Mexico in 1846-1848, and was brevetted captain for his part in the assault on Santa Cruz de Los Rosales in March 1848. He resigned from the Army in 1852, and moved to Indianapolis, probably because in 1849 he had married Mary F. Smith, a daughter of Oliver Hampton Smith, a prominent lawyer and Whig politician. In Indianapolis Love was in the real estate business, and also had a large farm. After 1856 he became involved, with his father-in-law, O. H. Smith, in railroad finance, particularly in connection with the Cleveland Straight Line Railroad and the Evansville, Indianapolis Cleveland Railroad.

At the same time, Love kept up his interest in military matters. During the first year of the Civil War, he served first in West Virginia under Brigadier General Morris, and then was involved in training the volunteer troops raised by Governor O. P. Morton. In the last months of 1862 Love commanded a division in defense of Cincinnati. He resigned from the Army on 1 January 1863, having been requested by Governor Morton to help in his administration, as a War Democrat. However, Morgan's raid in July 1863 called him back to service.

During the period of the war, Love began his connection with the Gatling Gun. Richard J. Gatling settled in Indianapolis in 1854 who set up his factory in Indianapolis. General Love bought stock in the company, and also represented the company as it presented the gun. The Gatling company moved to Hartford, Conn., in 1870, and soon was sold to the Colt Firearms Company. Love, though he began selling his stock in 1873, was still representing the company a year later.Toward the end of his life, Love engaged in "the land-claim business." In 1877 Governor James D. "Blue Jeans" Williams appointed him to a four-man commission to erect a new State House in Indianapolis, and he served on this until his death. In 1880 he was appointed by Congress to be a manager of the National Soldiers Home, which had four branches: in Dayton, Ohio; Augusta, Maine; Hampton, Virginia; and Milwaukee, Wisconsin. He also worked to get Democratic veterans to support General W. S. Hancock

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

The collection primarily, but not exclusively, contains professional letters from prominent political and legal individuals to either John Love or O. H. Smith. It is arranged in three series: letters to Law, letters to Smith and letters to other individuals. All series are arranged alphabetically by sender. The collection was acquired under the description of “autographs of Indiana lawyers, politicians, and more” and seeming have no other connection.
