HISTORICAL SKETCH

George Pheldon Stewart and William H. Porter established the Indianapolis Recorder, an African American newspaper, in 1895 at 122 West New York Street in Indianapolis. Porter and Stewart also operated a commercial printing business on the premises. Stewart bought Porter's share of the business in 1899 and relocated to 414 Indiana Avenue in 1900; later to the Knights of Pythias building at 236–40 West Walnut Street; to 518–20 Indiana Avenue in 1918; and to 2901 North Tacoma Avenue in 1975. Fannie Caldwell Stewart became the owner and publisher of the Recorder after her husband's death in 1924, and Marcus C. Stewart became managing editor. Marcus C. Stewart was owner and editor of the Recorder at the time of his death in 1983. Eunice Trotter purchased the business from the Stewart family in 1988. Trotter sold the Recorder to William G. Mays in 1990.

The Recorder used few illustrations before 1906. By 1916 portraits of church leaders, reformists, and politicians illustrated articles on the first two pages of the paper. Some advertisements were also illustrated. Photographs of local sports teams appeared by 1935, though news photographs were not widely used until the mid 1950s. Publicity photographs of entertainers illustrated the entertainment pages starting in the late 1930s. Wire service photographs, often of athletes, also appeared at this time.

News photographs made in Indianapolis illustrated the Recorder regularly starting from the late 1940s. Scenes of accidents, violent deaths, and arrests dominated the front pages from the mid 1950s until the early 1960s. Photographs of NAACP and Civil Rights movement activities also illustrated the newspaper through this time. The Recorder used images of local church groups, social clubs, and sorority and fraternity members frequently from the early 1950s. By 1960, photographs illustrated all sections of the newspaper.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH

George Pheldon Stewart, the son of William H. and Josephine Stewart of Vincennes, Indiana, was born 13 March 1874. He moved to Indianapolis in 1894, and married Fannie Belle Caldwell, formerly of Louisville, in September 1898. The couple raised six children: Joyce Caldwell, Marcus C., Fredonia Helen and Theodore Douglass (twins), Henry Sweetland, and Clarence Porter.

Stewart was a leader in the Colored Republican Committee, the Indiana Association of Colored Men, the Indiana chapter of the National Negro Business League, and the Indiana Negro Welfare League. He was affiliated, fraternally, with the Waterford Lodge No.13; Free and Accepted Masons, Marion Lodge No.5, Knights of Pythias; Persian Temple No.46; Nobles Mystic Shrine; and the Indianapolis Camp of the American Woodsmen. Stewart died in Indianapolis in 1924.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

The Indianapolis Recorder Collection contains 184 linear feet of black-and-white and color photographs; printed material; manuscripts; and ink, pencil, and mechanically reproduced drawings dating from circa 1900 to 1987. The collection is divided into two series. Series 1 dates from circa 1900 to 1983, with most items dating from circa 1950 to 1979. Series 2 dates from 1980 to 1981, and from 1983 to 1987, with a small number of photographs from the 1960s and 1970s. There are no photographs in the collection dating from 1982.

The Recorder newspaper donated the collection to the Indiana Historical Society in two accessions in May 1984, and March 1999. The first accession (Series 1) was processed and made available to researchers by July 1997. The second accession (Series 2) was processed between August 1999 and January 2000. This portion of the collection includes nine linear feet of black-and-white photographs, one and one-half linear feet of color photographs, and one-half foot of printed and graphic material, respectively. Not all photographs printed in the newspaper during this period were included in the accession.

Series 1 and Series 2 vary in terms of physical arrangement, size, and subject content. For these reasons each series, though part of the same collection, will require different research strategies. Photographs in Series 1 are filed alphabetically by subject, proper name, or corporate name. Patrons may search Series 1 by scanning the folder titles indicated in the Box and Folder List for Series 1. Indices also exist to lead patrons to socially or aesthetically interesting portraits of individuals and families. These indices are as follows: Babies and Children, Portraits, Armed Services Personnel, and Entertainers. The index "Entertainers" is further subdivided into the following categories: Gospel Singers, Male Musicians, Male/Female Bands, Female Vocal Groups, Male Vocal Groups, Female Vocalists, Male Vocalists, Female Musicians. For conservation reasons color photographs, graphics, printed material, and manuscript items are filed alphabetically in separate boxes. These box numbers appear at the end of the box and folder list for Series 1, in the listing: Series 1, Printed and Manuscript Material, Colored Photographs.

The processor at the Indiana Historical Society processed items in Series 2 according to the original order of the material at the time of donation, which was according to the date of publication in the newspaper. The processor then created an index to the personal and corporate names, and subject headings found in the series. Patrons may scan this index to locate a search term (e. g. Girl Scouts, or NAACP). The date or dates associated with the search term indicate the date of the file folder in which the item is stored. The patron may then turn to the Box and Folder List for Series 2 to locate the box and folder number (as assigned by the processor) where the item is stored.

Researchers using this collection will observe that the photographs are stored in individual sleeves and backed by sheets of archival paper. The processor at the Indiana Historical Society transcribed all relevant information originally written on the back of the photographs to the archival paper. The processor did not transcribe printing instructions, which usually consisted of mathematical formulas for enlarging or reducing the photograph for printing purposes. For Series 1, volunteers with personal knowledge of people and events in the particular photographs included additional information in brackets ([]) on the archival paper. For conservation reasons, the photographs and archival paper must remain in the plastic sleeve during viewing. All relevant information is written on the archival paper that backs the photographs. Recorder staff used wax to affix the photographs to layout sheets during newspaper publication, and most photographs retained residual amounts of wax that could not be removed. This residual wax can adhere the photograph to the plastic sleeve and archival paper, and the photograph may tear if removed from the sleeve. All photographs must remain in the archival sleeves for viewing.

Variations in the subject content between the series reflect changes in the focus of the newspaper through the decades. Material in Series 1 shows that the Recorder functioned as an organ for international and local news about African Americans until the early 1980s. Series 2 reflects a change in focus to the activities of local politicians and interest groups. The following Series descriptions explain the depth of the collection in greater detail.

SERIES 1 DESCRIPTION

This series contains approximately 170 linear feet of black-and-white photographs, one linear foot of color photographs, one foot of printed material, and one-half foot of graphic and manuscript material, respectively. The photographs in the series consist of news and documentary images made by professional photographers, portraits made in commercial studios, and snapshots. These items illustrated news and feature articles, announcements, and advertisements in the Recorder, and newsletters and other publications printed by the company's commercial printing business. These items date from mainly the 1950s to circa 1979.

The photographs used in the newspaper document local, statewide, national, and international events, and cultural trends significant to Indiana's African American community. Photographs made in Indianapolis dominate the collection, but images from smaller Indiana communities are also represented. Portraits of non-African Americans include politicians, sports figures, and entertainers. The Indianapolis Recorder did not publish every photograph in this collection.

Indianapolis-based, professional photographers made most of the news and documentary photographs in the collection. Photographs credited to Jim Burres, Richard Gaither, and others date from the 1950s through the early 1970s. These images include portraits, news, and documentary images of African American groups and individuals at political meetings, cultural and social activities, rallies and protests, sporting events, and crime and accident scenes. Recorder staff writers including Houston Rodgers, Jim Cummings, and members of the Stewart family also made photographs for the newspaper. Unidentified photographers shot exterior views of commercial buildings, and churches on Indiana Avenue and the surrounding neighborhood, particularly in the 1940s.

Portraits made by studios such as Boyd's Photo Studio, The Brown Showcase, Harris Brothers., L. S. Ayres and Company, and others illustrated church, obituary, and memorial notices; engagement and graduation announcements; and career and professional appointments. Studio photographs also illustrated advertisements for political candidates and retail businesses, and publicity notices for African American entertainers, night clubs, and social clubs. Personal snapshots provided by individuals illustrated obituary and memorial notices, birth, and other announcements.

The Recorder also used wire service photographs made by Keystone Pictures, the Associated Negro Press, the Overseas World Service, and other sources. These photographs, made between circa 1941 and circa 1965, mostly concern the role of African Americans in World War II, the International Red Cross, and events in the national Civil Rights movement. The images also document milestones in the careers of prominent African American judges, lawyers, politicians, sports figures, activists, entertainers, and educators.

Promotional photographs from television networks such as ABC and CBS, and companies such as Frigidaire, RCA, and Trans World Airlines date from the late 1940s through the 1960s. The African American actors, musicians, and models in these photographs were not necessarily born or raised in Indiana, but the photographs reflect the role of African Americans as consumers in post-1950 America. Publicity photographs from recording companies include portraits of prominent musicians and bands, and groups that recorded music but did not become widely known. These images date mainly from the 1950s through the early 1970s.

Printed material in the collection includes pamphlets and scorebooks from the 1955–1956 Indiana State Basketball Sectionals, and press releases regarding the Indianapolis Clowns, Kansas City Monarchs, and Memphis Red Sox of the Negro Baseball League. Other printed material includes examples of advertising with racist content, such as a notice barring African Americans from a local bridge tournament (see folder titled "Segregation," Box 120, Folder 25), and a "baseball ticket" printed by the Ku Klux Klan (see folder titled "Ku Klux Klan," Box 80, Folder 14). Original graphics include comics drawn by students at Crispus Attucks High School (circa 1950s), and a pencil sketch of a street in the Indiana Avenue neighborhood.

Manuscript material includes a handwritten letter to the Recorder describing violence witnessed during an arrest on Indiana Avenue in 1964. This letter is in the folder titled: Police [Brutality] (Box 107, Folder 18). Other manuscripts include two handwritten letters from inmates at the Indiana State Reformatory in November 1974 (Box 68, Folder 8). The letters from inmates discuss the treatment of prisoners in the institution, and prison conditions. A list identifying children in photographs associated with the organization Homes for Black Children of Indianapolis (Box 65, Folder 13) is restricted until 2040. This list contains the full names of a group of children who were candidates for adoption in the early 1960s.

The designation "Job" on a folder title identifies groups of photographs used in commercial print production for items such as company brochures, newsletters, or advertisements. Color photographs, images larger than 8 x 10 inches, and manuscript, graphic, and printed material were removed from the general collection for conservation purposes and stored in appropriate locations. Document removal forms placed in the original location of such items describe the item and indicate the alternate storage location.

Fire damaged the Recorder offices on at least two occasions, the latest in 1955. The first calamity may have destroyed most photographs made before 1934, as approximately fifty portraits of police officers, firefighters, criminals, and sports personalities made before circa 1940 are fire damaged. These photographs, a small number of snapshots, and wedding and studio portraits made before circa 1920 represent a small portion of the collection. Most photographs in the collection were made after circa 1941. Snapshots and studio portraits made before 1920 were donated by individuals to illustrate obituary or memorial notices that were published from the 1920s to the 1950s. The earliest photograph identified by date shows the production room of the Indianapolis Recorder newspaper in 1921, with George P. Stewart at work. Other early photographs show the Stewart family posing in front of the Recorder premises at 414 Indiana Avenue, circa 1906.

Recorder photographers and staff identified most photographs in the collection at the time of publication. This identification was handwritten or typeset, and included titles of organizations or events, names of individuals represented, the photographers' name, and the expected date of publication in the newspaper. Not every photograph included a date of publication, and the expected date of publication annotated on the photograph was not always accurate, particularly after 1970. After 1970 photographs were often published one to four weeks following the date noted on the back of the image. Recorder staff and photographers usually printed identifying information for cutlines on the back of the photograph. Elements of this identifying information appeared as the cutline under the photograph in the published newspaper.

Staff at the Recorder originally filed the photographs in this series alphabetically, interfiling studio portraits and snapshots with documentary photographs of organizations and events. The processor reconstructed the original filing order, as many photographs were misfiled, and in most instances assigned folder titles on the basis of content. Assigned titles are enclosed in brackets ([]). Folder titles without brackets ([]) were derived from filing directions annotated by Recorder staff on the back of a small number of photographs. The processor placed most photographs of individuals and families in files that are titled according to surnames. Most of these folders contain photographs that represent a range of surnames. For example, the folder titled "Duli–Dunl" contains photographs of individuals with the following surnames: Dulin, Dullum, Dumpson, Duncan, Dunga,; and Dunlop. Similarly, the folder titled "Prid–Prim" contains photographs of individuals with these surnames: Pride, Priestly, Primm, and Primus.

Photographs of prominent individuals and their families were placed in individual folders. For example, photographs of Sam Jones exist within the folder titled "Jones, Sam" rather than folders titled "Jones." Photographs of Louise Terry Batties exist under "Batties, Louise Terry," while images of members of her immediate family exist under "Batties Family." Photographs of prominent individuals also exist within folders associated with their personal or private activities. For example, folders pertaining to the activities of the Urban League contain images of Sam Jones. Similarly, Louise Terry Batties was a founding member and president of the Recorder Women Sponsors. She posed often with this prominent social club.

Photographs of individuals and organizations may exist in a number of locations. For example, photographs relating to the Republican Party are filed under: "Republicans," "GOP," the "31 Club," the "Indiana State Federation of Republican Women's Clubs," "Republican Women's Clubs," and by the names of prominent party members, such as Mrs. Henri Gibson. Similarly, photographs from the Vietnam War exist under "Army," "Navy/Marines," "Vietnam," and by the surnames of individual soldiers. Researchers should scan the entire Box and Folder List (see page 9) for the names of individuals, organizations, subject headings, and events that may relate to a particular research topic.

The Recorder staff filed most sports-related photographs under the broad subject heading "Sports." The processor retained this subject heading, and created subdivisions specific to the identified activity (e. g. Basketball, Football); and level of play (e. g. Amateur, High School, Professional). A small number of sports-related photographs filed by specific subject remained in their original file locations. For example, Recorder staff filed photographs of boxers and boxing activities under "Golden Gloves" as well as under the surnames of individual boxers. These photographs remained in their original filing locations. Photographs of Little League baseball teams and players remained under "Baseball, Little League" and "Douglass Little League" because the volume of photographs stored in this original location indicated a consistent filing method used over a number of years. Other photographs of baseball players and teams are filed under "Sports, Baseball."

A small number of photographs showing basketball action and teams from Crispus Attucks High School remain in their original file location, under "Attucks High School [Basketball, 1955–1956]," but most are filed under "Sports, Basketball, High School, Attucks." Other photographs of basketball action are filed under "Sports, Basketball, High School." Team photographs are filed by school name (e. g. "Sports, Basketball, High School, Tech"; "Sports, Basketball, High School, Gary Roosevelt.") Portraits of college football players remained in original filing locations according to proper names, as well as under respective colleges, such as "Indiana University," and "Purdue."

The Recorder staff filed most photographs of church congregations and buildings alphabetically by congregation (e. g. Shiloh Baptist Church; Campbell Chapel AME Church). Images of unidentified churches, church groups by denomination, inter-denominational groups, and church conferences remain as originally filed by Recorder staff under the broad heading "Church," with appropriate subdivisions. Portraits of pastors and clergy may be filed by individual surname, according to congregation, or under the broad heading "Clergy."

The processor filed unidentified or misfiled photographs of children within the subject file "Children." Images of children also exist alphabetically in portrait files, and in folders titled for events and holidays, such as Easter, Christmas, Valentines Day, and Thanksgiving; and in folders associated with social clubs (including "Boy Scouts," and "Girl Scouts") and church activities. The Recorder publishing company provided social activities for newspaper carriers and their families, including a yearly picnic. Photographs filed under "Indianapolis Recorder Charities, Carriers," and "Indianapolis Recorder Charities, Recorder Annual Picnic" show boys and girls enjoying games, food, and parties sponsored by the Indianapolis Recorder newspaper. Children appear frequently, as bystanders or participants in photographs of civil rights activities, and as victims or observers of accidents and other calamities.

Photographs of crime scenes, shootings, accidents, fires, and other calamities date largely from the 1950s and 1960s. These scenes of dead or critically injured men, women, and children are graphically violent, and may disturb some researchers. The photographs also represent the skills of the photographers employed by the newspaper. Jim Burres in particular photographed people watching these scenes, including family and friends of victims; perpetrators of violent crimes; police and emergency personnel; and curious crowds. Folders that contain violent images are titled as follows: "Accidents," "Crimes," "Death Scenes," "Drownings," "Fires," "Murder Scenes," "Shooting Scenes," and "Sensitive."

Most portraits in the collection remain in the alphabetical filing order used by the Recorder staff. Researchers wishing to view portraits of individuals or families may locate the item by viewing appropriate folders. The collection also contains a number of portraits that are artistically or historically interesting. These include images of children, military personnel, and entertainers whose names may not be immediately known to researchers.

To allow better access to these photographs, the processor created four indices by subject category. These indices are as follows: Babies and Children, Portraits, Armed Services Personnel, and Entertainers. The index "Entertainers" is further subdivided into the following categories: Gospel Singers, Male Musicians, Male/Female Bands, Female Vocal Groups, Male Vocal Groups, Female Vocalists, Male Vocalists, Female Musicians.

SERIES 2 DESCRIPTION

Series 2 contains black-and-white and color photographs, printed material, and graphics associated mainly with events in Indianapolis. The photographs consist of news and documentary images of African American groups and individuals at political meetings, cultural and social activities, rallies and protests, and sporting events. Human-interest shots of children and families include scenes at Black Expo, the Indiana State Fair, local parks, and in neighborhoods. Photographs of the Gaither Quintuplets show the children from birth to age four. A small number of photographs show events in Anderson, Indiana associated with Black Expo and a labor march, and basketball games in Shelbyville and Marion, Indiana. The items date mainly from 1980 to 1987.

Indianapolis-based professional photographers made most of the photographs in Series 2. These photographers include Richard A. Gaither, Walt Thomas, Marcell Williams, Leonard and Jeannie Clark, Meria Dawson-Brooms, Ken Skelton, Ed Lacey, Jr., Elliott Beavers, Edward Evans (Evans Photography Studio), and Jim Burres. Most photographs are identified, and credited to the photographer.

Photographs of local and national African American political leaders dominate the series. Images include Jesse Jackson campaigning in Indianapolis, and marching in a labor demonstration in Anderson, Indiana (folder title "4-9-83"). Local African American political leaders featured include Senator Julia Carson, Deputy Mayor Joseph Slash, Glenn Howard and State Representative William Crawford. Crawford was often photographed in association with committee work, including Black Expo and the Democratic Party. He is present in photographs related to opposition to the closure of Crispus Attucks High School, anti-apartheid marches, and the Jesse Jackson presidential campaign.

The series also contains photographs of social and religious leaders in association with political activities, protests, church events, and the NAACP. Dr. Andrew J. Brown, Dr. T. Garrott Benjamin, Mozell Sanders, Father Boniface Hardin, Moses Gray, and Judge Webster Brewer figure prominently in the collection.

Images of non-African American politicians in this series include Mayor William Hudnut, Governor Robert Orr, Richard Lugar, Dan Quayle, Andy Jacobs and John Mutz. Photographs of William Hudnut include portraits of Hudnut with members of Indianapolis City Council and committees, issuing awards or grants of behalf of community groups or the city, and in parks, playgrounds or basketball courts cavorting with children and young adults. Recorder photographers also photographed Hudnut's assistant, Susie Davis, who often accompanied or substituted for Hudnut at public events.

Unlike Series 1, Series 2 contains only a small number of automobile accident and murder scenes. Major crimes and accidents documented in the series include the murder of Dewayne Bible in a McDonald's restaurant (Folder title 11-23-85) and the crash of an airliner into the Ramada Airport Inn in October 1987 (Folder title 11-24-87). These images show close-ups of the destroyed hotel and emergency and security crews at work.

Series 2 contains a small number of publicity photographs of internationally known black entertainers, usually in association with their activities in Indianapolis. These entertainers include Esther Rolle and Mike Warren. There are more identified photographs of local entertainers in Series 2 than in Series 1. Local entertainers featured in this series include jazz musicians such as Jimmy Coe and actors playing at venues such as the Indianapolis Repertory Theater, the Soul People Repertory Theater, the Phoenix Theater, IUPUI, and other locations. There are few exterior photographs of businesses and street scenes in this series, as compared to Series 1. Photographs of charitable and social clubs are also rare, in comparison to Series 1. This may reflect the passing of a once vibrant activity within the African American community.

Other changes within society, as reflected in the photographs include a large number of photographs of children in daycare or other groups. Series 1 contained a large number of portraits of individual children made at portrait studios, while photographs of children in Series 2 mainly show children involved in group activities at schools, daycare centers, and community centers. Daycare centers photographed in this series include Auntie Mame's Child Development Center, and Kiddie Land Daycare. There are a small number of photographs of Girl Scout and Boy Scout activities, but a large number of images boys playing football for the Wheeler Boy's Club, 4-H groups, and summer and after school activities at Christamore House, the J.T.V. Hill Center, and other community centers. Photographs made in public schools show students and teachers in classrooms. There are no exterior photographs of school buildings in this series.

Sports photographs in Series 2 are largely action shots of professional, college, and high school basketball and football teams. The photographs reflect the arrival of the Indianapolis Colts football team, and the inclusion of the Indiana Pacers in the National Basketball Association. Women's sports are well represented in this series. Photographs of women athletes include college and high school basketball players, high school track and field stars, including Maicel Malone, and professional tennis players Zina Garrison and Lori McNeil. The series includes a number of photographs of boxer Marvin Johnson, and one image of Mike Tyson (6-13-87). Sports photographs made before 1980 include images of Jesse Owens and Ralph Metcalf (2-4-84). Oversize items in this series include composite pieces depicting Indianapolis Colts players and officials at the Colt's public welcoming ceremony on 2 April 1984, and views of auto racer Pierre Burley preparing for a race. The Colts photographs are dated 7 April 1984, and are stored in an oversize storage box (OVC, Box Number 158). The Burley photographs are dated 10 September 1983. and is stored in Box 184 (one-half size OVA).

Printed material in Series 2 includes campaign pamphlets, broadsides, and other ephemera for Mamie Townsend and Marvin L. Boatright. Other material includes pamphlets describing social services at Saint Peter Claver Center, a bumper sticker advertising a fund-raiser for the Gaither Quintuplets, a recruitment pamphlet from the Indianapolis Police Department, and funeral programs.

Graphic material includes a pen-and-ink sketch of the Benny Barth Quintet at the Orchid Room on Indiana Avenue in the 1950s. The sketch is signed "Harstein." Other graphic material consists of a pencil sketch of the Gaither Quintuplets by Rod Walker.

The processor retained the Recorder's original chronological filing system and created an index to the personal and corporate names, and subject headings found in the series. This single index allows for item level access to the material in this series. Patrons will scan this index to locate a search term (e. g. Girl Scouts, or NAACP). The date or dates associated with the search term indicate the date of the file folder in which the item is stored. The patron will then turn to the Series 2 Box and Folder List to locate the box and folder number (as assigned by the processor) where the item is stored.
