HISTORICAL SKETCH

The International Women's Year was created by the United Nations and private organizations to call attention to women's issues. The national organization that oversaw the year's activities was the National Commission on the Observance of International Women's Year; each state had its own Co-ordinating Committee which raised funds and served as an outreach point to the community.

In late 1975, the decision was made to expand the International Women's Year into the International Women's Decade. With the support of the United Nations, conferences were held around the world to discuss women's issues. The International Women's Decade ended in 1985.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

The collection includes papers and financial information of the Indiana Co-ordinating Committee, 1977-1978; photographs, slides and movies, newsletters and pamphlets from the National Commission on the Observance of International Women's Year, 1975-1985; transcripts of the proceedings of the 1977 State Meeting; 11 cassette tapes containing speeches and interviews; and two card files containing records of those who supported IWY. Also included are pamphlets published by the United Nations during the International Women's Decade.
