BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH

John Charles Black was born on 27 January 1839 to Rev. John Black and Josephine Culbertson in Lexington, Mississippi. When Rev. Black died in 1847, the family moved to Danville, Illinois.

John attended Wabash College in Crawfordsville, Indiana. He enlisted as a Sergeant Major in the army on 14 April 1861 from Crawfordsville. John first served in the Indiana Eleventh Infantry from 25 April to 4 August 1861. He then served in the Illinois Thirty-Seventh Infantry from 18 September 1861 until his resignation on 15 August 1865. During his military service, John was promoted to Major, Lieutenant Colonel, and Colonel. He also received the honorary rank of Brevet Brigadier General. He also was later awarded the Medal of Honor for his involvement in the action at Prairie Grove, Arkansas on 7 December 1862.

Following his resignation from the military, John returned to Danville and studied law and passed the bar in 1867. Black unsuccessfully ran for Congress in 1866, 1876, and 1884 and for the U.S. Senate in 1879. President Cleveland appointed John the Commissioner of Pensions, where he worked from 1885 until 1889. He was elected to Congress in 1892. In 1895, John resigned from office to accept the position of U.S. Attorney for the Northern District of Illinois.

President Roosevelt appointed Black to the Civil Service Commission in 1904, where he served until his retirement in 1913. His other positions included department commander of the Loyal Legion of Illinois (1895–1897), Illinois' department commander of the Grand Army of the Republic (GAR) (1898), and Commander-in-Chief of the GAR (1903–1904). John died 17 August 1915.
