NOTES:
BIографICAL SKETCH

Julia Graydon Sharpe (ca 1857–1939) was born in Indianapolis, the daughter of Joseph Kinne and Mary Ellen (Graydon) Sharpe. Her father was a prosperous leather merchant and real estate operator, and for some years after the death of banker Calvin Fletcher in 1866, the family lived in the large house Fletcher had built at what is now 10th and Pennsylvania Streets.

Julia Sharpe attended private schools in Indianapolis, and then Chegaray Institute in Philadelphia where she had special instruction in voice. Returning to Indianapolis, she attended Love and Gookins' first Indiana School of Art in 1878–1880, apparently specializing in drawing. Her artistic work then underwent a hiatus, partly because her father was a victim of the depression of the 1870s, partly because of her social activities.

She was an early and longtime member of the Flower Mission (see M 0071), and an active member of The Portfolio. Her activities brought her into frequent contact with James Whitcomb Riley. In 1894–1896 she was a student of William Forsyth and T. C. Steele at their second Indiana School of Art, and in 1896 she was one of a group of students who went with Forsyth on a sketching expedition to Corydon and Cedar Farm. Apparently Forsyth was a personal admirer of Sharpe, though he married someone else the next year.

In the winter of 1896–1897 Sharpe studied in New York at the Art Students League (with Augustus Saint Gaudens among others) and at William Merritt Chase's School of Art. In the fall of 1898 she went with her six-year-old niece on a sketching trip to the mountains of West Virginia.

In the early 1900s Sharpe had a studio on the top floor of her parents' home in Morton Place, and became well known for her studio parties. She worked in Brown County, in Brookville, and on Traverse Bay in Michigan. She also became much interested in designing bookplates.

Julia Sharpe was a loyal member and a guardian of the history of the Second Presbyterian Church and the Home for Aged Women (now Indianapolis Retirement Home (M 0519), and of the DAR (Caroline Scott Harrison Chapter). She was a fluent writer, and gave readings to many organizations, often in dialect in the style of J. W. Riley and Bret Harte. She never married, but lived with her parents and then with her two sisters, Ella Sharpe Duncan and Anna T. Sharpe.

Series 1 contains correspondence, notes, and poems. Of particular interest are notes from Indiana painter John W. Love (Folder 4) and from James Whitcomb Riley (Folders 5–8); poems of admiration from William Forsyth (Folder 9). In folder 10 there is a copy of A Child-World by James W. Riley (1897) inscribed by William Forsyth to Julia and includes a poem by Forsyth, Oct. 1896. Letters written by Julia Sharpe while studying at the Art Students League are in (Folders 12–14); a 1907 letter from Selma N. Steele describing the new Steele house in Brown County, and two letters of 1911 about a contested election at the Art Institute (Folder 15); World War I letters from Indianapolis protégé Winant P. Johnston and French soldiers (Folders 16–19). Folder 20 includes a letter with reminiscences about studying under William Merritt Chase, and letters from Henry Lane Wilson, George Ade, and Albert J. Beveridge. (Note: photographs of two of the J. W. Riley letters in Folder 5, and of the items in Folders 6 and 7 are found in M 0240 J. W. Riley, Box 1 Folder 20.)

Series 2 contains dialect stories, and a notebook with short portraits of important acquaintances and some club papers. There are also two Julia Sharpe sketchbooks. One, with sharp pencil sketches dated 1878–1881, shows the meticulous technique taught at the Love-Gookins art school (Folder 11). The other, in Folder 12 and dated 1894–1896, dates from the Forsyth-Steele school and has sketches done in a much broader style. There are also three female heads, one of an old woman in spectacles dated from West Virginia in 1898, and a sketch (1902) of and note (1906) from H & M. Nodder.

BV 3061 is a studio scrapbook, with Sharpe's tickets to different art schools, clippings, copies, and original drawings of bookplates, and photographs of some paintings. BV 3062 is a scrapbook kept from 1880 on by her sister Anna T. Sharpe contains mainly newspaper poetry, some social notices, and an obituary of John W. Love, who died young in 1880.
