BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH

Kenton Craig Emerson, also known as “Mike,” was born 4 December 1895 in Angola, Steuben County, Indiana to Fred A. and Ina Emerson. Fred and Ina Emerson also had two other sons, Lawrence Douglas Emerson (“Bill”), born ca. 1898, and J. Thomas Emerson (“Tom”), born ca. 1906.

Prior to serving in the United States Army, Emerson was employed by the Paige Motor Company in Detroit, Michigan. The date Sgt. Emerson enlisted is not known, but the correspondence in the collection indicates he was in England and France in January and February of 1917 with the American Expeditionary Force, Motor Truck Company 315, Supply Train 404. He then writes from Fort Crook, Nebraska, in September 1917, and Fort Harrison, Indiana, in October 1917. In January 1918 Emerson went to Camp Merritt, New Jersey. During the month of January, he was sent to France and was later stationed in Issur-Tille, Cote d’Or. In addition to Motor Truck Company 315, Emerson was assigned to the Wood Supply Office, Advance Quarter Master Depot #1. His duties during World War I included clearing land, chauffeuring officers, moving hospitals to the front lines, and driving and hauling ammunition for the Marines at Chateau Thierry.

Emerson returned home from the war in September 1919. The 1930 census indicates he married a woman named Lucille K. and they had two sons, David F. and Andrew C. His World War II registration card indicates he was working in Wabash for the Superion [sic] Insulation Company. Further information is not known.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

The collection is divided into four series: Correspondence; World War I Documents, Speeches, Artifacts; Photographs; Souvenir Postcards.

Series 1: Correspondence consists primarily of letters written by Kenton C. Emerson to his parents, with a few letters addressed to his brothers. There are a handful of letters written by people other than family in the collection, including one from Emerson's superior officer Col. Roy L. Marston.

Emerson describes the camps at which he is stationed, the scenery in France and his impressions of the country, and various towns he has seen including Alsace, Lorraine, Bordeaux, Dijon, Cannes, and Paris. His letters contain information on his three-week hospitalization and other illnesses, air raids near the front lines, the vehicles to which he is assigned and their performance, the shortage of funds, his affection for the Y.M.C.A., the Red Cross, food and rationing, and the importance of receiving mail. Emerson also expresses his difficulties in adjusting to army life and his discontent with the war and the lack of action he has seen. His letters include accounts of the front lines provided by other soldiers, and Emerson's patriotism surfaces often via claims that American soldiers are the world's best. He expresses much admiration for his superior officer Col. Marston.

Noteworthy letters include one dated December 1917 describing the hazing of a soldier with German sympathies, October and November 1918 letters mentioning people sick with influenza (the "Spanish Flu"), and one written in May 1919 describing the hanging of a soldier and the shooting of an officer accused of raping a young French girl (a picture postcard of the hanging is the folder labeled "Postcard Correspondence, 20 July 1914–24 June 1919"). Letters written during November 1918 provide reactions to the end of the war and victory celebrations, including the Victory Parade in Paris.

Series 2: World War I Documents, Speeches, Artifacts contains Emerson's special orders, permits, invitations, ration tickets, motor vehicle license, a booklet of President Woodrow Wilson's war speeches, and French and German currency.

Series 3: Photographs contains many images of Emerson, his fellow soldiers, Red Cross workers at the canteen, scenery in France, street scenes, buildings and churches intact and in ruins, and train yards and military camps. Some of the places shown include Belleau Wood Cemetery, Camp Doughboy, Dijon, Is-sur-Tille, Reims Cathedral, Til-Châtel, Verdun, Saint-Mihiel, and Versailles.

Series 4: Souvenir Postcards consists of blank postcards Emerson collected while visiting various cities in France, Monaco, and Switzerland.
