BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH

Mary Lyon Taylor (17 March 1872–5 June 1956), an Indianapolis pictorialist portrait photographer and sheet music publisher, was born Mary Gertrude Lyon in Ripon, Wisconsin to an upper middle-class family with many children.

Her father, Daniel Brayton Lyon, (24 February 1820–9 September 1912), son of Abel and Ester (Pulling) Lyon, was born in Edinburg, New York. He was an 1847 graduate of Union College, Schenectady, New York and a member of Phi Beta Kappa. On 31 December 1853 he married Tirzah West Lord (28 September 1828–27 May 1906). She was born in New-Ireland, Quebec, daughter of Peter Chandler Lord and Lois Dexter West Lord. Daniel Brayton Lyon and Tirzah Lord Lyon lived in Battle Creek, Grand Rapids, and Ionia, Michigan, where he was a teacher and Episcopal clergymen; in Ripon, Wisconsin he was superintendent of schools; in Merrillan, Wisconsin he was involved in farming and the lumber business; and in Minneapolis, Minnesota a real estate developer.

Mary Gertrude Lyon attended Minneapolis schools and a finishing school in the East. She also received artistic training at home and abroad, specializing in miniature portraits on porcelain and ivory. In her reminiscences, Taylor described her childhood: "Living the conventional life of the city my sisters and I attended private schools, finishing schools, and after that there were trips abroad--debutante parties . . . my life was filled with all the social gaiety a young girl could desire, cotillions, dinners, teas, etc. and this with church and charity occupied my time until I came to Indianapolis and was married."

While visiting her sister, Margaret (Lyon) Graham, wife of Christ Church Cathedral rector Rev. Andrew J. Graham, Mary met her future husband, Edward A. Taylor (20 January 1865–14 February 1934), whom she married on 6 July 1898. For several years Edward and Mary lived with his parents, William A. Taylor (9 September 1837–May 1911) and Margaret (Shade) Taylor (d. July 1911), at 16th Street and Central Avenue in Indianapolis. They later moved to 1941 N. Pennsylvania Street, in what is now the Herron-Morton Place neighborhood. They also spent time at Runnymede, the elder Taylors' farm near Noblesville. Edward A. and Mary had two sons: Edward Lord Taylor (21 August 1899–23 June 1950) and Heber Newton Lyon Taylor (3 June 1901–9 May 1995).

Edward A. Taylor worked as a traveling salesman for his father's business, the Taylor Belting Co. When the family experienced financial difficulties in 1906, Mary took up portrait photography to ease the burden. She photographed her family and friends in the drawing room of her home and eventually traveled to the sitters' homes. She worked in the "pictorialist" style, an artistic photographic genre characterized by its soft-focus appearance. In 1911 her photograph of Ruth Fletcher Hodges holding a camera won first prize in the Kodak Advertising Competition. Taylor's photographic career stopped in 1907 or 1908 when she separated from her husband and moved her two sons to Minneapolis. After about a year she reunited with her husband and returned to Indianapolis.

During the 1910s, the Taylors owned three cottages on Lake Maxinkuckee in Culver, Indiana. Mary and her sons spent the summer months there with Mr. Taylor visiting on weekends. In 1921 the Taylors bought Orchard Hills Addition, a thirty-five acre plot of land north of Indianapolis on Millersville Road near Brendonwood. The family fixed up the farmhouse and lived there from 1921–28. Their attempt at operating a dairy farm failed and they subdivided the property. In 1930 the Taylors moved to Los Angeles, California near their sons, later moving to La Jolla, California where Edward A. died in 1934.

Always musically inclined, Mary Lyon Taylor began publishing sheet music while she lived at Orchard Hills and continued composing until at least 1946. Her music was played on local radio stations and performed by the Indiana Theatre Orchestra, Indianapolis Athletic Club Orchestra, and the Los Angeles Biltmore Concert Orchestra.

Mary Lyon Taylor and her sons lived in the Hotel Figueroa in Los Angeles, and in Beverly Hills. For fifteen years Heber Lyon Taylor worked for the Pacific Electric Railway Co. as a train conductor and bus operator. Edward Lord Taylor held various jobs and served in the military during World War II. After Edward committed suicide in 1950, Mary and Heber returned to Indianapolis to develop the Orchard Hills property. Heber retired to La Jolla after his mother died in 1956; he lived in a retirement home in San Diego at the time of his death in 1995.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

The collection contains photographs, correspondence, short stories, poetry, song lyrics, sheet music, reminiscences, and genealogy materials of Mary Lyon Taylor and her family.

Series 1: Manuscript materials; Folders 1–9 contains the papers (1911–1954) of Mary Lyon Taylor, including correspondence to her family, her poetry and song lyrics, sheet music, and short stories. A letter and brochure concerning Mary Lyon Taylor's prize in the 1911 Kodak Advertising Competition are in Folder 2. Programs for musical recitals, letters about sheet music copyright, and promotional materials (including a letter of praise from Meredith Nicholson, 21 February 1928) are contained in Folder 7.

Correspondence and writings by Taylor's parents, Daniel Brayton Lyon and Tirzah Lord Lyon, are in Folders 10 and 11. Multiple copies of Edward A. Taylor's "The Story of my Life," a short, typewritten memoir, are in Folder 12. Folder 13 contains newspaper clippings, letters, and reminiscences of Taylor's son, Heber L. Taylor. The book Gabriel's Wooing, written by Rev. Andrew J. Graham, 1897, has been relocated to printed collections storage. Folder 15 contains Mary Lyon Taylor's genealogy research and typewritten genealogies of the Lord, Chandler, West, and Lyon families. Deeds and correspondence (1922–77) from the Orchard Hills Addition are in Folder 16. Orchard Hills Addition maps have been relocated to maps storage.

Series 2: Mary Lyon Taylor Pictorialist Photographs; contains vintage portraits by Mary Lyon Taylor, ca. 1906–10.

Series 3: Lyon and Taylor Family Portraits, Albums and Snapshots, 1860–1990 is made up of commercial portraits of Mary Lyon Taylor and family, snapshots of the Taylors at their homes in Indianapolis, near Noblesville, Orchard Hills Addition, at Lake Maxinkuckee, and in California. There are also three 1905 Edward S. Curtis platinotypes of Native American Indians.

Manuscript materials are stored chronologically within each folder. Many of the photographs were unidentified. The processor identified the subjects with the assistance of the donor Heber L. Taylor. For additional information see research notes stored in the P281 collection file in the processing area.
