

NOAH M. GREEN LETTER, 1814

Collection #
SC 2428

Table of Contents

User information
Biographical sketch
Scope and Content note
Cataloguing information

Processed by
Charles Latham
11 May 1994

USER INFORMATION

VOLUME OF COLLECTION: 1 item

COLLECTION DATE: 1814 (possibly 1817 or 1819)

PROVENANCE: Robert Russo, date unknown

RESTRICTIONS: None

REPRODUCTION RIGHTS: Permission to reproduce or publish material in this collection must be obtained in writing from the Indiana Historical Society

ALTERNATE FORMATS: None

OTHER FINDING AIDS: None

RELATED HOLDINGS: None

ACCESSION NUMBER: 94.0618x

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH

Noah M. Green, apparently a native of Vermont, was living in Trumbull County, in the Connecticut Reserve of Ohio, in 1814. He was a man of some education and apparently of some wealth, since he intended to take his family on an extensive journey to Natchez or New Orleans and then back to the Northeast via the West Indies.

SCOPE AND CONTENT

This collection contains one item, a letter written in 1814 by Noah M. Green to his cousin Captain John Willard in Barre, Vermont. The letter describes Green's health (tubercular), his plans for travel, and the society where he is. There are pleasant Yankees in the town of Bloomfield, but disagreeable Pennsylvanians and Southerners in the countryside. He also describes the harvests and the local flora and fauna. There is a kind of mandrake "not exceeded for fragrance or flavor by any apple," and "elk at this season...is as good as a likely two-year-old beef." But Green longs for the quiet of his library.

CATALOGUING INFORMATION

MAIN ENTRY: Green, Noah M.

SUBJECT ENTRIES; Green, Noah M.

Frontier and pioneer life--Ohio--Trumbull County

Trumbull County (Ohio)--Social life and customs

Trumbull County (Ohio)--Description and travel

END