BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH

Richard O. Shimer was born 29 December 1866 near the Indianapolis area, son of William R. Shimer and Elizabeth "Lizzie" O'Neal. Richard married Josephine Pattison on 29 December 1889, and they had at least three children, Thomas M., Charlotte, and Mary Alice. Charlotte's second husband, Harold S. Hildebrand, shot at least one of the films in this collection.

According to the 1910 census, Richard was a physician, although the 1920 census indicates he was a practitioner of Christian Science. Further family information is unknown at this time.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

Primarily utilizing black and white film, most of these silent moving images were taken by the Richard O. Shimer family during the decades of the 1920s–50s. Many of the family films are from the Indianapolis and Irvington areas of Indiana, although other communities may be depicted. In addition to the Shimer home movies, there are some professional films in the collection. Originally shot with 16mm film, these images have been converted to DVD and each film has been assigned a DVD number.

The family films depict events such as pageants, picnics, and reunions at Christian Park, a motorcade for Herbert Hoover, parades around the Soldiers and Sailors Monument in Indianapolis, building the Fourth Church of Christ

Scientist, playing polo at Fort Harrison, planes landing at the Indianapolis Municipal Airport, and racing at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway. The “General Superintendent’s Safety Day” film shows Conway Scrap Dock and workers presumably listening to speeches on safety. Other general topics include laying railroad tracks, neighborhood scenes, family vacations, visits to the zoo and various parks, schools, automobiles, scenery, fashions, farm animals and pets, horse racing, swimming, rifle drill teams, and enjoying the novelty of filming home movies. Places depicted other than Indiana include California, Florida, the Detroit Zoo, and Buffalo, New York.

Some of the professional films are official World War I films of the United States Navy and the United States Army. Other topics include Charles Lindbergh’s flight, the Grand Canyon and Yellowstone National Parks, building the Boulder Dam, the 1933 World’s Fair, and a film about a chimpanzee.

If the original films had handwritten labels describing their contents, the title has been placed within quotation marks “. If there was no title for the film, we have supplied one in brackets []. Supplemental information in brackets regarding the film’s contents is also provided when necessary. Some of the DVDs of “miscellaneous” material are supplemented by handwritten lists identifying events, persons, and places contained on the DVD. Titles of films that are italicized denote professional films.
